GIGLI'S WORK IN "LORELEY" WINS MUSIC LOVERS: DOUBLE BILL TO BE OFFERED AT MATINEE TODAY

Gigantic Fraud in Government Bonds Charged

PROMPT DENIAL VOICED BY HEADS OF THE TREASURY

MATTER OF RECORD, JOHNSON DECLARES

600 EMPLOYEES TO LOSE JOBS

Washington, April 26.—Six hundred employees of the bureau of engraving and printing, the storm center of the present civil service fight, will be discharged Saturday. Director Louis A. Hill, in announcing the lay-off, said that it affects all departments and is necessitated by falling off of work at the plant and the general policy to retrench to a pre-war basis. More discharges are to follow, Hill said, but politics will have nothing to do with it.

Those employees who will be dropped have been notified of their dismissal. A general indication had been given last March, Hill said, and those falling within the three classes from which the list of dismissals was selected were given notice. These classes are: Married women whose husbands are employed; war-time employees without civil service status; those who on the two-year extension of the retirement act will get pensions.

By the Associated Press.

Washington, April 26.—The statement was made on the floor of the house today by Representative Johnson, republican, South Dakota, that it "will later be shown by official documents that there are probably hundreds of millions of dollars of duplicate bonds in the United States."

Prompt denial of the statement was made by high treasury officials, who declared investigation by Secretary Mellon, of the bureau of engraving, had disclosed there was no truth in reports of the circulation on a large scale of counterfeit government securities.

Challenging the Johnson statement, Representative Wingo, Arkansas, democratic member of the house banking committee, declared it was calculated to cause uneasiness in the country, and that he did not believe Mr. Johnson ought to make it "unless he can back it up as the truth." Mr. Wingo expressed belief that an investigation would show that Secretary Mellon, in denying "reckless charges" about the existence of duplicate bonds "did not lie to the people of the country."

Discovered by McCarter.

As a basis for his charge as to alleged circulation of spurious securities, Mr. Johnson said that J. W. McCarter, assistant registrar of the treasury during the Wilson administration, "secured information in the course of his duties which convinced him that there had been enormous duplication of government bonds which had been printed by the bureau of engraving and printing and had gone through the office of the registrar of the treasury.

"I think Mr. McCarter took the right attitude when he presented the matter first to a distinguished democratic senator from my state, and very properly presented the matter to the assistant secretary of the treasury," Mr. Johnson continued. "He was very quickly informed at that time by the former administration that nothing was wrong; that there should be no investigation, and that he should keep his mouth shut or lose his position, and Mr. McCarter, who had developed the fact that will later be shown by official documents, that there are probably hundreds of millions of dollars of duplicate bonds in the United States, was discharged from service by his administration for presenting those facts to members of congress. I think a man who took that attitude in the former administration was ill-advised in what he had done."

Matter of Record.

Mr. Wingo added:

Scourge of Crime Loses Last Fight; Nick Carter Dead

BY SIDNEY B. WHIPPLE,
United News Staff Correspondent.

New York, April 26.—Nick Carter, intrepid, lynx-eyed sleuth, has lost his last battle. For 20 years he fought through a thousand grim fights with powerful desperadoes, pitting his life against theirs in a relentless war on organized villainy.

But fear—fear of old age and of "becoming a burden" on his friends—beat him at last, and he fired his last shot Wednesday, killing himself instantly.

The body of Frederick Van Rensselaer Dey was found in the Hotel Broztell, at Nyack. Beside it was a note to Deputy Police Commissioner Faurot—the noted Inspector Faurot—telling the inspector why he thus closed his career. Another note, to Major Joseph Caccavajo, a friend of years, told how "things have gone to smash—I am tired out and want to try the long sleep. It is no sudden decision. I cannot stomach the

SIMMONS SCORES TARIFF MEASURE

Washington, April 26.—Summing up a three hours' attack on the pending tariff bill today in the senate, Senator Simmons, democrat, North Carolina, declared that it was his "deliberate judgment" that the measure was "fraught with more danger to the people of the country and the institutions under which they live than any bill which ever crossed the threshold of this chamber."

The senator said he supposed the measure would be passed, not because it met the judgment of the senate, but because a considerable part of the maojrity of the senate are "willing to forego their opposition, which they regard as unjust impositions on the people, in order to get concessions for those in whom they are especially interested."

Departing from the text of his address, which had been prepared after what he described as a careful study of the bill, the democratic leader said there should be no deliberate delaying

Thousands Offer Reverent Tribute To 'Lost Cause'

BY PARKS RUSK.

Witnessed by one of the greatest crowds ever assembled on Atlanta's streets to view a parade here, the annual Memorial day parade Wednesday was one of the most inspiring processions in years.

It was followed by an eloquent tribute to the bravery and valor of confederate soldiers and to the traditions of the south by former Governor John M. Slaton, at Oakland cemetery.

Weather for the parade and the subsequent memorial ceremonies at the cemetery was ideal. The early morning was gray and the clouds hung low, but later the sun appeared. As it mounted it became apparent that the afternoon would be unpleasantly warm for the hundreds of marchers and the thousands of citizens who intended to watch them.

Weather Is Fine.

Then just before the detachment of mounted police began to clear Peachtree, Whitehall and Hunter streets of traffic a light breeze arose and the

GRIM WAR SPECTER AGAIN THREATENS

BY RALPH H. TURNER.
United News Staff Correspondent.

Genoa, April 26.—The specter of another European war has appeared with menacing suddenness at Genoa, obscuring everything else for the moment.

Another conflagration in Europe, which would most surely draw the United States in as it did before, is inevitable unless the Genoa conference can deal successfully with the dangerous situation that now exists, Lloyd George declared in an amazing speech at a dinner given to him by British and American newspaper correspondents.

Just a few hours before, the British had startled the conference by demanding that all nations present who signed the Versailles treaty, except Germany, meet as soon as possible to demand what France means by her threat to act alone against Germany to collect her share of the repaartions payments.

The whole conference has been

There's one thing strange about the Druid Hills barbecue at which the artists of the Metropolitan Opera company are entertained by the officers of the Atlanta Music Festival association. No one appears on the scene in his shirt sleeves.

That makes the Druid Hills affairs de luxe or distinctive and anything but debauched, but anybody in Georgia knows that no barbecue was ever yet just exactly a barbecue unless all the men guests went around without their coats and two or three of them with suspenders showing.

I went out to Druid Hills Wednesday with the express intent and purpose of seeing a grand opera star wearing suspenders, I think I'd rather see that than the South American plesiasorus or Julian Boehm without a green necktie! But I was doomed to disappointment. All the opera artists were dressed conventionally except Antonio Scotti, who wore a golfing outfit, which was entirely natural as the affair was given at a golfing club. I guess Scotti took the nomenclature of the Place de Barbecue seriously.

No Beer, No Dice.

However, we used to be accustomed to seeing beer at barbecues and maybe a stud game and perhaps way off in the woods somewhere a dice debate. Our times are progressing

TOLL OF DEATH IN TEXAS FLOOD MOUNTS TO 63

NORTHERN LOUISIANA DECLARED IN DANGER

Citizens Called to Labor Gangs Opposing Spread of Waters—Danger Signals Broadcast.

Dallas, Texas, April 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—Sixty-three persons were unaccounted for or known to be dead today as a result of the floods and one windstorm in Texas in the last twenty-four hours.

The list included: Fort Worth, 47 missing; Breckenridge, three reported drowned; Grand Prairie, two missing; Palmer, two reported drowned; Waco, one reported drowned; Sonora, one drowned, and Belton, one drowned; Mountain Creek, near Cleburne, one man reported killed in windstorm yesterday.

SECTION OF LEVEE CAVES IN WEDNESDAY.

New Orleans, April 26.—A section of the Mississippi river levee four miles north of Ferriday, La., in Concordia parish, went out at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and tonight is flooding that parish and eventually will spread into parts of four other parishes—Catahoula, Franklin, Avoyelles and Tensas. The territory in the vicinity of the crevasse is one of the richest farming sections of Louisiana and it is certain that the loss will reach into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The break occurred without warning and tonight had widened to two hundred feet. Several important towns are in the immediate path of the flood waters. No loss of life had been reported.

Three hundred men with flood fighting equipment were rushed today to Marrero, on the west bank of the Mississippi river, opposite New Orleans, and after a hard fight prevented what seriously threatened to be the first break in the embankments in the vicinity of this city. The levee at that point is comparatively narrow and has been under the constant surveillance of engineers. Serious trouble began to develop there last night when a crack appeared in the earthworks and a cave-in appeared imminent today. Engineers sent out a hurried call for help and within an hour three hundred men were at work blanketing the inside of the levee. Engineers declared late today that the situation was under control. A break at this point would have flooded several towns separated from New Orleans by the river.

Crack at Myrtle Grove.

Reports last night from Myrtle Grove, on the west bank of the river 35 miles below New Orleans, where a break occurred last Saturday, stated that the ends of the broken levee had been tied. This was denied today by J. B. Bassich, trustee of the Deer Range plantation company, whose property was inundated by the crevasse. He returned from there today and declared that the gap was now about three hundred feet wide and that the ends were still crumbling. He said that a contract had been let to a private concern to attempt to close the break, but that actual work had not been started.

Efforts of the flood fighters in the central stretches of the Mississippi were centered tonight at a point seven miles south of Hickman, Ky., where sloughing in the incline of Reelfoot levee occurred today, and south of Arkansas City, where caving and sand boils have been keeping repair forces at work night and day. At other points where trouble has occurred during the past week, the situation was reported by the engineers as "encouraging."

Major L. Y. Kerr, United States engineer stationed at Memphis, after receiving reports from the threatened section of embankment below Hickman, said that the situation there was not "alarming," and was well in hand.

At Tunica, Miss., and along the lower end of Bolivar county work is continuing night and day on topping and strengthening the levees and engineers express themselves as confi-

'LORELEY' HEARD BY MUSIC LOVERS HERE FIRST TIME

Atlanta Debut of Sensational Young Tenor Serves to Draw Immense Throng to Auditorium.

OVATIONS ARE GIVEN TO MUZIO AND DANISE

Raymonde Delanois, a Local Favorite, and Martino, the Basso, Prove Very Pleasing.

By FUZZY WOODRUFF.

Atlanta had waited a year for the debut of Beniamino Gigli. The debut was worth the wait. The young Italian tenor faced the severest test that has ever confronted an artist and he won through it, completely and triumphantly.

It was a big, gripping, human scene down at the auditorium Wednesday night. An unknown opera, Catalani's "Loreley," was to introduce the young tenor, who a year ago, was hailed as the successor of Caruso.

A year ago, Gigli was forced to cancel his Atlanta engagement after arriving in the city. Many refused to accept the explanation of throat trouble, and when Gigli's name was announced as one of the principal artists of the 1922 season, it caused not a ripple. The people, who had been willing to accept him the year before were dubious. He would have to show them.

Gigli arrived in Atlanta this year ahead of the rest of the stars. Reports had come from New York that he was singing in splendid voice. Atlanta was going to find him a sensation. "Press agent stuff," said Atlanta laconically and let it go at that.

Audience Not Inspiring.

And when Gigli made his entrance Wednesday night, if the audience wasn't hostile, it was at least impartially passive, the worst sort of an audience to inspire a singer. There was just a faint ripple of applause, as he entered. Then a great silence of anticipation as he concluded his first recitative and went into his first aria.

Not a note of it was familiar. This was the first time that "Loreley" had been sung in Atlanta. It was the second time it had been sung by the Metropolitan company, but there was no necessity for familiarity of work. There was a familiarity of tone. It was the tone of the Southern mocking bird, singing his sweetest morning plaint.

The music poured from the young tenor's throat. Not an effort, hardly a deep breath, just sweetness. Every note was as true as it was sweet. This voice has a marvelous appeal. Gigli can work his vocal chords and manipulate the heart-strings of his every hearer. His is distinctly a voice of sentimentality. It would be a rare treat to hear him sing an old love ballad.

Stand In Own Shoes.

It is manifestly unfair to hail Gigli as the successor of Caruso. Caruso was Caruso. There'll be no more like him probably in this geological age, but just the same Gigli is Gigli. He can well afford to stand in his own shoes. He can well afford to trust his fame and fortune to his own voice.

The last plaintive note of his first song had hardly died away before the audience had broken out in a thunder of applause. It continued to applaud long after Robert Moranzoni had lifted his baton to continue the score. It was a real demonstration, the biggest of the present season.

Gigli was palpably pleased. He bowed time and time again and the applause grew. He couldn't keep down a smile of triumph. He had earned the right to that smile and it remained with him through the evening. After each curtain he appeared and it was not hard to see that he was ecstatically happy.

A Great Night.

From the singers' point of view, "Loreley" furnished a great night. Every member of the cast caught the infection of Gigli's triumph. Claudia Muzio sang with divine brilliance and tremendous power. Raymonde Delaunois made a profound impression with the dainty beauty of her vocalization, while Giovanni Martino sang with scholarly understanding and with a fine rotundity of tone. Danise sang as Danise can sing. There is no necessity of expatiating on his art. He has become the first of baritones.

The audience, a fine one by the way, had come to hear "Loreley" more through the promptings of curiosity than the compellings of desire. The tenor was new and the opera was newer.

Catalani's work is distinctly melodious and decidedly novel. It's the old story of the sirens of the Rhine, a Teutonic legend, and Catalani hasen't lost all the Teutonic flavor by making it an Italian work. It offers magnificent opportunities for scenic effects and the opportunities are made the most of.

"Loreley Is Melodious."

However, the audience of Wednesday found "Loreley" melodious without being tuneful. There is no air or theme or even suggestion that the members of the audience take away with them, still the music is impressive, dramatic, appealing and thoroughly pleasing.

The real strength of the production, when the excellencies of the producing artists are forgotten, is the overwhelming beauty of its staging.

All the scenes are naturally along the Rhine and the stage is repeatedly filled with fairy water maidens, floating around through the broad waters or playing about precipitous cliffs and making the production replete with a sort of eerie enchantment that is taken away from the performance. The pictures will remain in the mind's eye long after the music has been lost to memory's ears.

Ballet Introduced.

The ballet is twice introduced, and on each occasion the audience seemed unable to get enough of it. It does not come on as a divertisement, but is worked in splendidly into the story of the opera. The ballet music is haunting and impressive.

The wedding scene in Act II is finely staged with the gallants from Atlanta's institution of erudition having their first chance this season of appearing as priests, soldiers, knights, retainers, acolytes, archers, pallbearers.

Even pugilism was represented when the eminent Pal Flournoy appeared as an archer's hop, and a few other things. The ensemble was more than usually riotous in its coloring.

Double Bill.

The double performance of Thursday matinee holds out many things for the opera goers. In the opening opera of the bill, two of Atlanta's greatest favorites appear. This is "The Secret of Suzanne" and the only two singers in the Wolf-Ferrari novelty are the eminent Antonio Scotti and Lucrezia Bori, the charming soprano, who probably has the largest Atlanta following of any Metropolitan artist.

The second opera will be "Pagliacci" with the youthful South American, Salazar singing Caruso's famous role of Canio.

Plan to Erect Science Center In Washington

Washington, April 26.—Plans for the erection in Washington of a $1,300,000 building as the home of the National Academy of Sciences and the National Research Council and a center for American science in all its fields was announced by Dr. G. L. Walcott, president of the National Academy, at the opening session of its meeting here. The building, which is expected to be completed by a year from next fall, Dr. Walcott said, is a gift of the Carnegie Foundation of New York. Facing the Lincoln Memorial in Potomac park, from the north, the structure, it was said, will be of simple classical style, rising three stories from a broad terrace and having a frontage of 260 feet.

In additon to serving as a conference center for scientists, the institution will be designed, it was said, as a "mutating museum" of the progress of scientific achievement. A large auditorium and a lecture room on the main floor will be surrounded by seven exhibition rooms in which the newest scientific discoveries will be illustrated for the benefit of the public.

One of the most interesting features of the building for the visitors will be a coelostat telescope mounted on the dome of the rotunda which will throw a large image of the sun on a white surface and demonstrate to the actual vision of the layman the natural phenomenon of the sun's spots. He will see the spots change in number and form from day to day and move across the disc as the sun turns on its axis.

Repeating the celebrated experiment of Foucault, another phenomenon—the rotation of the earth—will be shown by a 60-foot pendulum suspended from the center of the dome. Swinging in a long arch, the pendulum will mark an invariable direction in space, and as the earth and the building rotate beneath it this will be plainly shown by the steady change in direction of the pendulum's swing over a divided arc. Many other phenomena, it was said, will be demonstrated in striking form, including magnetic storms and earthquakes.

STARTLING METEOR SEEN IN CALIFORNIA

Los Angeles, Cal., April 26.—A meteor of unusual size and brilliancy darted across the sky west of Los Angeles several nights ago.

Observers at the Mount Wilson observatory, about 20 miles north of here, said the meteor was 15 or 20 times as brilliant as the planet Venus. From their perch high upon the mountainside they saw the meteor break at an apparently short distance from the earth.

BUTTS HIGHWAY BOND HEARING SATURDAY

Jackson, Ga., April 26.—(Special.) Judge W. E. H. Searcy, Jr., of Griffin, has named April 28 as the date for a hearing on the validation of the recent $150,000 bond issue voted by citizens of Butts county for road and highway improvement. The hearing will be held in Jackson at 10 o'clock. While in Jackson Judge Searcy will appoint the members of the bond and road building commission.

In the election held March 28, citizens of Butts county voted for $150,000 worth of road and highway improvement bonds, a substantial majority being registered in favor of the issue. The state and federal governments will match this amount and the $300,000 made available will be used for improving the highways in the county.

Mrs. E. J. Alden, recently appointed assistant secretary of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, has the distinction of being the only woman in America holding a corporate office with a Class 1 railway.

Thousands of women in Canada who are not admitted to the franchise under existing laws will be entitled to vote under an amendment to the Dominion elections act to be passed at the present session of parliament.

National Chamber To Discuss Europe At Annual Meeting

Washington, April 26.—European conditions and their effect on American business are to be discussed at the tenth annual meeting of the chamber of commerce of the United States to be held here May 10 to 18. The main subject of the convention, the chamber announced, was chosen with the realization that no plans for the future of the American business can be made without taking into account the European situation, including such ploblems as the allied debt, reparations settlements, paper currency issues, exchange fluctuations and ocean shipping."

MARIETTA, OHIO, MAN RECEIVES WGM BROADCAST

Marietta, Ohio, was heard from by The Constitution Monday as being one of the cities in which WGM is being received. The set which received WGM in Marietta, O., is owned by Thomas M. Reilly, 807 Third street. He writes:

"About ten o'clock last evening (eastern time) I tuned my radio outfit and as usual I heard Detroit, Deal Beach and Newark. I tuned a little more and I heard someone giving press, I noticed a lot of the news items were from Georgia and I 'stuck with you' until 10:30 (eastern time) when you signed off. I heard the operator say, 'This is WGM signing off.'

"I certainly was pleased to hear you and I think hearing your broadcasts beats my records.

"I was using an aerial 125 feet long, 30 or 40 feet high, large Turney spiderwebs and old type audion tube with one step of amplification. I have two steps, but you came in very QSA on one step."

dent of being able to hold the embankments in this section.

FORT WORTH HEAVY SUFFERER.

Fort Worth, Texas, April 26.—Continued reports of dead and missing in the flood that has gripped Fort Worth for two days, tonight had brought the list to 47. A check is not yet possible and verification of the unofficial reports are held up while the flooded areas are searched by rescuers. Only three bodies have been recovered.

The list of injured remained at 29, according to reports from the hospitals. The property loss is estimated at $1,000,000.

The levee board plans to investigate the reported dynamiting of the embankments in several places late Monday night as soon as the flood waters recede, according to M. L. McCain, board chairman. Board members, he said, did not believe that the water could have torn the holes in the levees which were pronounced in excellent condition recently.

More than $5,000 has been raised for the relief of the refugees and food and clothing are being distributed.

Preventive Action.

Action looking to the prevention of future flooding of the city's utilities plants probably will be taken after the flood recedes, Mayor E. R. Cockerell stated tonight. Water service was made available today when the flood water which put the plant out of commission yesterday was pumped out by the fire department.

The last report of the river stage was 36 feet, but recession since this afternoon was expected to bring it down rapidly.

All railroads reported improved conditions today and operation on schedules is expected by tomorrow night.

Water west of the Van Zandt viaduct has receded sufficiently this afternoon to permit motor trucks carrying food supplies to the homes of flood sufferers in Arlington Heights and the Van Zandt addition which had been marooned since early yesterday when the flood broke.

ATLANTAN IN FORT WORTH. RELATIVES HERE ANXIOUS.

Relatives in Atlanta are anxious over the fate of Mrs. H. L. Billett of Athens avenue, of this city, who left the city several days ago to visit in Fort Worth and Denton, Texas. Mrs. H. A. Wallace, of Oglethorpe avenue, a sister, says that all efforts to communicate with her Texas relatives by wire or telephone have been in vain.

NORTHERN LOUISIANA DECLARED IN DANGER.

New Orleans, April 26.—Unless northeastern Louisiana responds to the appeals of the Tensas Basin and southeast Arkansas levee district boards for greater numbers of men to guard the levees in southeastern Arkansas, all of northeastern Louisiana is in great danger of being flooded, was the message sent to many Louisiana towns by the United States engineer in charge of the Mississippi river flood fighters in Arkansas late today.

In response to this urgent appeal Mayor Arnold Bernstein, of Monroe, La., issued a proclamation late today calling upon every able-bodied man in Ouachita parish to lay aside his own affairs and go immediately to Arkansas City to assist in fighting the flood.

Mayor Bernstein also appointed a committee composed of sixteen prominent planters to perform a labor organization to assist through the present emergency, and issued a call for a mass meeting of citizens of the parish to be held at Monroe tomorrow afternoon for the purpose of organizing labor forces and sending every available man to the Mississippi levees.

Similar appeals were issued in a great many other northeastern Louisiana towns today. Levee board heads and engineers declare the situation in Arkansas can be held in hand, but that the flood is menacing because of the inability to keep labor on the levees.

MISSISSIPPI FLOOD FIGHTERS BUSY.

Memphis, Tenn., April 26.—Caving in river bank in front of the Reelfoot levee, seven miles south of Hickman, extending the "pocket" at that point to the slope of the embankment, drew the attention of Mississippi flood fighters today to the southern Kentucky front, but with protective measures well under way engineers still were confident that the crest now moving south of Cairo would pass through the central reaches of the waterways without a break in the main embankments.

Reports from other points in the Memphis river district were favorable, according to engineers directing the fight, with overnight reports indicating progress in the task of strengthening possible danger points.

Additional workmen and material were hurried to the Reelfoot embankment and the work of strengthening the earthwork were continued today, but with rain adding to the difficulty of the task.

Conditions Improved.

Latest reports from Arkansas City and Tunica, Miss., regarded as points of possible danger for several days, indicated conditions at both places improved.

Today's river reports showed the water falling at Cairo, but still rising at Paducah, on the Ohio. North of Cairo the Mississippi is falling at all points, while the Ohio is receding north of Paducah with the exception of a slight rise at Pittsburg. At Memphis the Mississippi rose two-tenths of a foot since yesterday to a stage of 41.6 feet, with crest predictions of 42.5 feet here for early next week. Helena reported a rise of two-tenths and Arkansas City a stationary stage of 58 feet.

tactics on the minority side, but that there must be full and free discussion "to make clear what this bill, if passed, will mean to the American people."

Senator Simmons, who was chairman of the senate finance committee when the present Underwood act was framed, was given close attention by about a score of senators, one of the largest attendances on the floor since the debate on the tariff measure opened. He declared that the rates in the bill calculated upon the basis of the price of products during the two periods were from 40 to 50 per cent higher than those of the "ill-fated Payne-Aldrich" tariff and were double those in the Underwood law. Enactment of the measure, he asserted, would result in higher costs of living, increased unemployment and further "monopolization of American industries."

The North Carolina senator charged that the rule followed by the finance committee in determining rates together with the super-added rate making powers conferred upon the president "makes rate fixing almost as much a matter of political and personal patronage as the distribution of federal officers." Again he said that the high rates in the bill were "insanity pure and simple," and the outcome of the demands of "tariff beneficiaries thrown into a panic by a temporary condition."

GIGANTIC FRAUD IN BONDS CHARGED

Mr. Johnson:

"I will say that that is all a matter of public record. I took personally all of this data down to the department of justice myself early in the year 1921, after we had tried in every way to secure action from the former administration. These letters that were written to Mr. Leffingwell, at that time an assistant secretary of the treasury, are easily procurable. I have them in my files, and I will be glad to insert them at this point."

There was objection, however.

Mr. Wingo then said his "question was the date on which this gentleman brought this information to you."

Fall of 1920.

Mr. Johnson: "The gentleman sent the information to me in its real definite form in the fall of 1920."

Mr. Wingo: "You did not bring it to the attention of Secretary Mellon?"

Mr. Johnson: "I did not. I brought it to the attention of the department of justice, where I think it ought to have gone."

Mr. Wingo: "Does the gentleman have information upon which he can pass a conclusion that there are millons of duplicate bonds printed?"

Mr. Johnson: "I will say to the gentleman that I took down seven typewritten sheets, single space, of numbers of duplicate bonds, and some bonds running 100,000 higher than the bonds issued. There is no man who can tell how many were issued."

Was Furnished List.

Mr. Wingo: "The gentleman was furnished a list of them. Has not the gentleman conducted an investigation or anyone for him, to see whether there was any truth in the allegation?"

Mr. Johnson: "I will say to the gentleman I am satisfied there is truth in it, because I remember at one time it was shown conclusively that a colored taxicab driver in Washington was discovered down in front of the New Willard with 31 $1,000 duplicate bonds, and he was discharged from custody in four days. I will say to the gentleman that I submitted seven pages of duplicate bonds."

Mr. Wingo: "What did Mr. Mellon say to the gentleman?"

Mr. Johnson: "I have never discussed it with him. The first notice was given to the administration when Mr. Wilson was in power and Mr. McCarter was compelled to leave the service because he was bringing this to the attention of the administration with which he was affiliated."

Information Asked.

Mr. Johnson was asked if he had information as to what the check-up at the bureau of engraving, with view to those things, divulged.

"I have no information as to what," he replied. "That has not been a part of my duties. I will say that my investigation, which was of an independent character, and which not only produced some of the facts which no one denied, came to another branch of the government, and the exact part in detail which individuals have had in this, I am not able to tell."

Mr. Wingo declared he took it that no member of congress "would be so reckless of the public welfare as to stifle the facts with reference to any matter that involves the public credit or instruments of the government in the hands of citizens and banks and trust companies throughout the country.

"While the present secretary of the treasury belongs to a different political party from that to which I belong," said Mr. Wingo, "I do not believe he is going to tell the country a falsehood, and when he said a few days ago that there was nothing in the statements that were sent broadcast, and that they could have nothing but a bad effect on the credit of the United States and bring uneasiness to investors and banks and holders of trust funds that might hold the bonds of the United States, I say that when Secretary Mellon said these wild, reckless statements were false, I believe that Secretary Mellon spoke with the knowledge of the facts and that he would not deny it if it were true but that the man certainly would take the American people into his confidence and say so if it were true."

Immediate Probe.

"If it is true," he added, "and you are going to continue to bandy that thing in public press and this record here, you owe it to your party to have an immediate investigation."

High treasury officials declared in commenting on the case today that the charges by former Assistant Register McCarter were denied by former Secretary of the Treasury Houston at the time as baseless and in the opinion of the treasury effectively disposed of. A taxicab driver was arrested at the time, they added, with liberty bonds which were found to have been stolen but not duplicates.

"REPORT WITHOUT FOUNDATION," MELLON.

Washington, April 26.—Charges that the ocuntry is flooded with millions of dollars worth of counterfeit currency, federal reserve notes, government securities and stamps "are wholly without foundation," Secretary Mellon declared tonight in a ter to Frank J. Coleman, editor of the Plate Printer.

Mr. Mellon's letter was in response to one from Mr. Coleman submitting at the secretary's request, evidence upon which such charges were published in The Plate Printer, a publication of the Union Plate Printer Employees of the bureau of engraving and printing.

The treasury secretary declared that data submitted by Mr. Coleman was "entirely misleading" and "consisted of all the counterfeits reported since the civil war, including many that have never been accepted in circulation."

The receipts of counterfeit currency by the secret service, he asserted, furnished the most accurate indication of the amount actually in circulation and he quoted figures comparing the amount of counterfeits to the genuine issues outstanding for the past five years.

Small Percentage.

But of the counterfeits coming into the possession of the treasury, Mr. Mellon explained, only a small part represented money actually in circulation. During the fiscal year 1921, he stated, counterfeits to the amount of $196,993 were recovered against a genuine circulation of $4,556,328,982 but of the former sum $108,925 was captured before the issues were placed in circulation and $73,546 was in raised notes, leaving the amount of counterfeit notes received from circulation during the year only $14,522.

No counterfeits of war saving stamps have been found since a counterfeit discovered in 1919, he continued, and the adoption of a system requiring them to be placed in the hands of postoffice officials before redemption, while the only counterfeit revenue stamps reported were "bottled in bond" strip stamps which "can cause no loss except to those who purchase 'bootleg' whiskey." He added that there had been no counterfeits reported of postage stamps, liberty bonds, victory notes or interest coupons.

"It is important," Mr. Mellon said, "that the public should be informed that such sensational statements, reflecting as they do on the credit of the government and validity of its obligations are wholly without foundation."

21 YEARS OF KNOWING HOW

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR COMING THIS WEEK

Atlanta will entertain several hundred Knights Templar Friday and Saturday, when a half dozen special trains loaded with the wearers of the white plume will stop off here for a day's outing after having attended a three days' conclave in New Orleans.

Commanderies from Philadelphia, Cleveland, Chicago and other cities in the east and central states will be included in the visiting delegations, according to James B. Moore, of the Couer de Lion commandery. Columbia commandery, of Chicago, with its 100-piece brass band, will arrive Friday morning at the same time the grand master's special on which Joseph K. Orr, of Atlanta, most eminent grand master of North America, with his staff, is due here.

Arrangements for a parade Friday afternoon in which the Columbia commandery band and the Atlanta Knights Templar band will participate, in addition to several hundred knights, are being formulated, Mr. Moore stated. Civic organizations of Atlanta, including the chamber of commerce, Atlanta Convention bureau, Masonic club, Rotary, Kiwanis, Civitan, Lions club, and the Retail Merchants association, are aiding in the entertainment plans for the visitors.

Interest centers in a consolidated band concert in Piedmont park, Friday evening, the time to be announced later. While in Atlanta the visiting Templars will be escorted on an automobile tour of the city, points of interest to be visited, including Stone Mountain and the Scottish Rite hospital.

H. W. Finch and Mr. Moore, of the Atlanta commandery, are in charge of the arrangements.

EDUCATIONAL FUND IS PROPOSED BY ORR.

New Orleans, April 26.—A plan suggested by Grand Master J. K. Orr, of Atlanta, by which $400,000 would be expended by the Knights Templar each year for the education of American girls and boys was considered at some length by the grand encampment of the order here today. No decision was reached.

The report of a special committee headed by S. P. Browning, grand commander of Kentucky, recommended that $100,000 be transferred from the permanent fund as a nucleus for the proposed educational plan and that each of the 400,000 Knights Templar in the United States be assessed $1 a year to provide for the philanthropy.

A feature of today's sessions of the grand commandery was the exemplification of the secret floor work of the order by the Long Beach, California, commandery team, which put on the work in full ceremonial form. This is said to be the first time in fifty years that an individual commandery has been permitted to go through such a ritual, and a large throng of the more than 35,000 Templars in the city turned out to witness the spectacle.

At Heinemann Park all day long crack drill teams went through their fancy marches, sword drills, manual at arms and unnumbered evolutions while the judges, three army officers, inspected and recorded each team as they progressed—half an hour being alloted to each of the twelve teams competing today. Ten other teams will drill tomorrow.

Tonight's parade in which "Facts about Faries" were depicted in a series of seventeen elaborately tinted and designed floats which rivalled any ever seen here in fifty years of Mardi Gras pageants, older residents declare, gave the young folks and older ones, too, much impressive instruction as to the denisons of "Fairyland."

WOMEN VOTERS NAME MOVIES COMMITTEE

FIGHT ON CHARTERS TO REOPEN TONIGHT

Atlanta saw a complete lull of hostilities Wednesday in the charter fight, but the battle will be renewed tonight with a triangular debate at the Walker Street school.

Mrs. Rogers Winter is scheduled to speak for the Choate charter. Henry Quillian, professor of law at Emory university, will champion the Atlanta plan. Councilman Claude Ashley will defend the present plan, with its proposed amendments.

The meeting will start at 7:30 o'clock and a big attendance of second ward citizens and other voters is expected.

Chamber Planning To Entertain 50 Trade Secretaries

Plans to entertain approximately fifty secretaries of chambers of commerce in Florida and south Georgia who will stop in Atlanta Sunday, accompanied by their wives, en route to Nashville to attend the fifteenth annual convention of the Southern Commercial Secretaries' association, which convenes May 1 for a four days' session, are being formulated by local chamber officials, according to B. S. Barker, secretary.

The Atlanta convention bureau, in conjunction with the chamber, has arranged a program for the visitors as follows:

Assemble at Piedmont hotel at 10:30 Sunday morning; attend the services at St Philip's cathedral at 11 o'clock; luncheon at the Daffodil cafe at 1 o'clock; automobile tour of the city, including the residential sections, parks and Stone mountain in the afternoon. Dinner at the Piedmont hotel at 6:30 o'clock, after which the visitors will board their train for Nashville.

North Side Site For Girls' High School Proposed

New Offer Is Announced by School Commissioner McCalley.

A movement to take the girls' high school to the north side was announced Wednesday. If council and the bond commission fails to agree with the four members of the board of education who voted Tuesday for a site on Washington street now occupied by the Hebrew Orphanage, a site on the north side will be submitted, it is said.

School Commissioner W. L. McCalley announced the new offer. He stated that it is a tract of 15 acres, has been appraised at $150,000 and is offered to the city for school purposes for $75,000.

He said the owners are willing to accept in payment school property that will be abandoned by the city in the erection of schools at new locations.

Three members of the board voted against the orphanage site, which consists of approximately six acres, favoring instead the Capitol avenue-Vanira street tract embracing seventeen acres.

FIFTH WARD CHARTER MEETING SATURDAY

A mass meeting to discuss the charter question will be held in the fifth ward on April 29 at 7:30 o'clock, under the auspices of the League of Women Voters. Miss Louise Bentley, chairman of the Fifth Ward League of Women Voters campaign organization, has invited Edgar Watkins, Luther Williams and Miss Eleanor Raoul to speak.

POLITICS TALKED BY WOMEN VOTERS

Baltimore, Md., April 23.—The difficult problem of whether the National League of Women oVters shall "get into politics" by indorsing or opposing candidates for political office was considered today at the league's annual convention here.

Preceding the consideration of this subject, the convention finished with its long list of committee reports and recommendations.

Among the reports presented was one on "the year in congress" by Miss Marian I. Parkhurst. Recognizing the achievements of the league in obtaining national and state legislation for the benefit of womankind, the report first gave place to the passage by congress of the Sheppard-Towner maternity bill, for the enactment of which the league concentrated its strong efforts. Other notable accomplishments for which the report gave credit to the league was obtaining an appropriation from congress for carrying on the interdepartmental social hygiene and making permanent the woman's bureau in industry which had been established as a war emergency bureau.

Mrs. Maude Wood Park, of Washington, who has been president of the league since its organization three years ago, was renominated, and Miss Elizabeth J. Hauser, of Girard, Ohio, was chosen secretary to succeed Mrs. Solon Jacobs, of Birmingham, Ala. Miss Katherine Ludington, of New York city, director of the first region, was selected as treasurer in place of Mrs. S. T. McKnight, of Minneapolis, Minn.

Mrs. Richard Edwards, of Peru, Ind., first vice president, and Miss Belle Sherwin, of Cleveland, second vice president, who, with the president, secretary and treasurer, compose the board of directors, were renominated.

Elections will take place tomorrow.

National Y. W. C. A. Finance Committee Report Is Adopted

Hot Springs, Ark., April 26.—The report of the finance commission, recommending cuts in all departments, was adopted by the seventh national convention of the Young Women's Christian association today, after the proposed cut in the Near East work had been rejected. The amount of the total budget, after all cuts had been made, was $1,293,473.

A resolution of peace, calling upon all national associations to promote character in principles of social and international conduct by strengthening the public conscience and promoting a better understanding between classes, nations and races, will be introduced before the convention this afternoon, by Miss Charlotte Niven, London, England, executive secretary of the world's committee. The resolution was drawn up at Champery, Switzerland, at the international conference in 1920 and embodies the views and opinions of representatives of twenty-six nations. Speakers from many foreign nations, in attendance at the convention, will discuss the resolution.

THOUSANDS HONOR SOUTH'S "LOST CAUSE"

clouds began to flirt with the sun intermittently shutting it off from the crowds which struggled to hold standing room on both sides of the line of march.

The strains of "Dixie," as played by a military band, did not fail to arouse the usual high pitch of patriotism, and lusty cheers greeted it as the procession swung down Peachtree street, across the viaduct and thence to the cemetery. The rebel yell as given by the feeble confederate veterans who marched with measured tread, was thrilling as the days of the sixties.

The parade was colorful and, to an extent, gay, but it was with a feeling of reverence to the old confederacy and its survivors, and not a feeling of holiday gayety, that the thousands of citizens watched it and cheered it.

Banks, business houses and public buildings were closed to permit their personnel to participate in the tribute to the civil war veterans.

Veterans of three wars were in the line of march. Members of the local camps of the Spanish-American war veterans, and veteran of the world war had a place in the procession.

Stockbridge Is Marshal.

The parade moved from Peachtree and Baker streets at 2 o'clock under command of Captain Basil Stockbridge, world war veteran and marshal of the day. The marshal and his aides were preceded by Chief Beavers and a squad of mounted officers.

In the first division were United States army regulars, national guard infantry and national guard cavalry.

The second division, under command of Major Eugene Schmidt, included the cadet corps of Georgia Military academy, Georgia Tech and Marist college.

The third division, of which Captain Hal Morrison was chief, included confederate veterans. They were preceded by the Atlanta Drum corps. Many of the old soldiers, too infirm to walk, were in automobiles. After the old soldiers came the Sons of Confederate Veterans. Veterans of the other wars also appeared in this division.

Cadets in Force.

Cadets from the three boys high schools were included in the fourth division, which was in charge of Lieutenant Colonel James M. Little. Then came the school children of the city, grouped according to schools and grades, and the Ladies' Memorial association, the American Legion auxiliary, the Society of Colonial Dames, the Society of Patriots and Founders, the Spanish War Veterans' auxiliary, the D. A. R., the U. D. C., a bevy of girls from Woodberry school, and other organizations.

John M. Slaton, former governor, delivered the memorial address from the confederate memorial shaft at Oakland cemetery, where the parade formally disbanded. His text was the following quotation from an address delivered in 1898 by a New England statesman:

"The American people have learned to know, as never before, the quality of the southern stock, and to value its noble contribution to the American character; its courage in war, its attachment to home and state, its love of rural life, its capacity for great affection and generous emotion, its aptness for command; above all its constancy, that virtue above all virtues, without which no people can long be either great or free—after all, the fruit of this vine has a flavor not to be found in other gardens."

"Nearly six decades have passed since the flag of the confederacy was furled," the ex-governor said. "Its followers recked not the cost nor shrunk from the result. In advance, they knew the vast superiority of numbers with which they had to contend, and the great resources of their antagonists. They believed they were right and for their cause they were willing to enter their struggle.

"The ancestors of these men had framed the bill of rights and had written the Constitution of the United States. Not a page in the glorious history of the republic but bore the imprint of those whose blood flowed in southern veins.

Defended Principles.

"In the halls of congress, southern statesmen had advocated and defended the principles upon which the government was founded. Their people at home were educated in statecraft, and loved their country with a passion born of intelligence and devotion.

"With the southern people were unwritten laws that bound conscience and conduct which no statues could reach. The severest penalty of ostracism visited those who violated the higher code of ethics but took care to come within the law.

"These southern people exalted womanhood and endowed her with a grace and charm that lent a radience to civilization—but in attaining the virtues with which she was credited, she developed a strength and nobility that equaled the courage and fortitude of her husband when he left her for the dread fields of war.

"And next to the women, the devotion of the southerner was to justice and fair dealing. He could take no unfair advantage of his antagonist in conflict, nor would he singly, or collectively, be unfair in civic life. The benefits of government were in common and its burdens were likewise a common lot."

Praise for Memorial.

The speaker praised the plan of the memorial associations of the south to complete the Jefferson Davis memorial in Kentucky.

"The memorial associations have claimed it as their right to complete the tribute the veterans have begun. They mean to ask no donations and propose no concerted effort to provide the means. Every dollar which enters into the expression of a people's devotion and gratitude shall be a free-will offering.

"May I not speak for the posterity of those whose sires would have regarded no cause more holy? Lincoln has his monument in the capital of the nation; Grant has his memorial on a commanding eminence overlooking the Hudson in the great metropolis of the country. In the populous cities of the north and east are lasting tributes to their great generals who returned with their triumphant armies to receive all the rewards that victory could bestow.

Strong Support Pledged To Road Bond Campaign

Athens, Ga., April 26.—(Special.) Moving with cyclonic sweep across the state in a northeasterly direction the storm of enthusiasm in favor of the good roads bond issue, which last week centered in Bainbridge, where representatives from 93 counties, in attendance upon the state convention of commissioners of roads and revenues indorsed the proposed $75,000,000 road bond issue, today found its center in Athens, where the commissioners of roads and revenues of the eighth congressional district were assembled for their annual convention, and indorsed the bond issue practically without a dissenting vote.

No more enthusiastic meeting has been held in the interest of the bond issue and no more representative gathering could be assembled in the state than those from the counties comprising the eighth district. Every county in the district was represented not only by its commissioners of roads and revenues, but representatives and senators also were in attendance and showed their interest in the presentation of the bond plan that they were heartily in sympathy with the movement, many of them expressing themselves as supporting the measure.

Howard Speaks.

Judge J. H. Howard, attorney for the highway board, made the principal address. He went into the matter of the necessity of the bond issue and said that it was the only plan thus far advanced that seemed to meet the needs of the state in financing the highway system. Judge Howard paid glowing tribute to Dr. C. M. Strahan, the first chairman of the highway board, under whose direction the entire system of roads was charted. Dr. Strahan lives in Athens. Tribute was also given to Engineer Slack, of the highway department, who is responsible for all the bridges built on the state highway system. Engineer Slack is a native Georgian, graduate of the state university, and according to Judge Howard is recognized as one of two or three outstanding bridge engineers in the United States. Under Mr. Slack's direction, Georgia last year built one-seventh of all the bridges constructed in the United States on the system of federal aid roads.

W. R. Neel, state highway engineer, explained the federal law and its application to Georgia's constitutional limitations as they now exist.

Appeals for Support.

T. G. Farmer, director of the Georgia Good Roads association, made a strong appeal for the bond issue, explaining that all the good roads association was asking in the bond legislation was such an amount as could be retired in 30 years by the gasoline tax and automobile license fees. He said if the opponents of the bond plan would advance a better plan than this, the Good Roads association was ready to support it.

Emmett Williams, representative from Walton county, said he and his county were solidly behind the bond movement.

H. H. Hampton, of Colbert, chairman in Madison county for the Calhoun highway, expressed himself as in favor of the bond plan.

F. E. Boswell, of Greene county, also stated he favored the bonds. Mr. Boswell is representative from Greene in the legislature.

Another good roads advocate in attendance at the meeting was Fred L. White, of Buckhead, president of the first good roads club in Georgia, which was organized in Albany in 1908. Mr. White stated his county could be counted for good roads.

Brown's Position.

Senator L. C. Brown, of Athens, said he was ready to support the bond issue to the extent that could be retired by the two funds proposed, but that he was opposed to any additional tax on property to build roads.

J. M. Hodgson, of Athens, member of Clarke county board of commissioners almost since its organization, is one of the most enthusiastic supporters of the bond issue.

Judge George C. Grogan, judge of the city court of Elberton, was another enthusiastic booster for the good roads movement. Judge Grogan said "I regard this as a great day for the eighth district. Impetus has been given here today to a movement that I regard as the greatest undertaken by this state within our day and I hope and trust it will sweep the state with the degree of enthusiasm which the movement deserves."

One of the most concrete illustrations of what good roads mean to a community was made by L. H. Smith, commissioner from Elbert county, who stated that he lived four miles out of Elberton and that since a good road had been put past his place he had been able to save in the upkeep and operation of his car in one year's time exactly $250. He said he had kept an account that showed this saving in one year's time on a four-mile stretch of road.

Senator G. M. Bond, of Bowman, said "I favor everything that has been said here today in favor of the $75,000,000 bond issue. It is the best thing that could happen to our state."

Representative Whitworth, of Madison county, also expressed his hearty aproval of the issue. J. Y. Swift, chairman of the bond commission of Elbert county, said he regarded the bond issue as the best thing that the people could support. Frank Ballard, of Covington, was another strong supporter of the bond movement.

Probably the most interested and enthusiastic good roads advocate at the meeting, however, was Dr. Strahan, who served the state highway board as its first chairman. Dr. Strahan said he could not express his feelings over the way the good roads movement had advanced in Georgia since the highway department was formed.

He said the bond plan was simply carrying out the original idea back of the good roads legislation and that every mile of highway that had been constructed on the state system had been built with the idea that the state would provide a fund for repayment of county funds thus used, and that no other plan had been advanced that would ever meet with the popular approval the bond plan would muster. He expressed himself as heartily in sympathy with the bond plan and congratulated the people that they had awakened to their real opportunity.

VIEW OF MEMORIAL DAY PARADE

the native ground of our chieftain, in sight of a home which first taught him its sacredness and inspired by his knightly heart to venture all in defense of his beloved people from the Potomac to the Rio Grande!

"Surely, there could be but one response, if the declaration of the Massachusetts senator be true, that 'Constancy, a virtue above all virtues,' is a distinguishing quality of southern character."

Walker at Midvale.

Midvale, Ga., April 26.—(Special.) Memorial day always fittingly observed at Midville, reached a climax in the great program presented here today under the auspices of the Daughters of the Confederacy.

Clifford Walker was the orator of the day. Mr. Walker paid eloquent tribute to the women of the confederacy and the cause that was lost but which history has vindicated in principle as the introduction to his remarks but his address as a whole was a departure from the usual form of Memorial day orations.

With original style and thought he made an appeal for universal and perpetual peace through the general promulgation and acceptance of the principles of the Christ. The address was heartening and inspirational in the highest sense. He did not allude to politics.

Milledgeville Ceremonies.

Milledgeville, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—Milledgeville has had many Memorial day celebrations and in them all the city has taken pride, but probably none has surpassed today's celebration in point of attendance and impressive ceremonies. The memorial address was delivered by Dr. Thomas D. Eills, of Macon. He was introduced by Carlisle Giles.

At the executive meeting of veterans' Camp Doles a great honor was bestowed upon D. S. Sanford, son of a confederate veteran and commander of the local camp of C. S. V. He was elected assistant commander of Camp Doles U. C. V.

The following officers for the camp of Sons of Confederate Veterans were elected:

Americus, Ga., April 26.—(Special.) Judge Walter F. George, of Vienna, was chief speaker at memorial exercises held here today in the Rylander theater. Business houses suspended for the exercises, which began at 10:30 o'clock this morning, and the schools granted the pupils a holiday after all had attended the memorial occasion in a body.

At Thomasville.

Thomasville, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—The dinner given by the members of John B. Gordon chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy, was one of the chief features of Memorial day here. The dinner was served in the lower story of the courthouse on long tables erected for the occasion, and consisted of the same elaborate and bountiful menu always served to and enjoyed by the veterans.

At 10 o'clock memorial exercises and a general singing were held at the courthouse, commemorating the late J. B. Vaughan, composer of music and noted singer of Athens. These exercises were under the auspices of the Vaughan Memorial association and began at 10 o'clock.

Dr. Dickey Speaks.

Griffin, Ga., April 26.—(Special.) The confederate veterans of Spalding and adjoining counties were honored today by the Boynton chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and citizens of the county and city.

The veterans were honor guests at luncheon at the Griffin hotel at noon.

Peacock was master of ceremonies, and the address was delivered by Dr. J. C. Turner, pastor of the First Baptist church. West Point, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—Attorney General George M. Napier was the principal orator at memorial exercises held here today. Hundreds of people attended the ceremonies.

At Winder.

Winder, Ga., April 26.—(Special.) After singing "America," the invocation was made by Rev. L. W. Collins. W. M. Holsenbeck introduced R. B. Russell, Jr., who delivered the memorial address.

Exercises in Columbus

Columbus, Ga., April 26.—(Special.) The remarkable record of Memorial day services in Columbus of never having been prevented by rain was maintained today, when ideal weather conditions prevailed.

Officers and enlisted men from Camp Benning participated in today's exercises. The orator of the day was the Rev. J. A. Thomas, of Columbus, and the small band of confederate veterans was flanked by boy scouts and soldiers from Benning representing practically every state in the union.

MISSING PLANE FOUND ON ISLAND

Miami, Fla., April 26.—The seaplane Santa Maria, missing since 6 o'clock Monday, when it left Key West for Nassau, was found shortly before noon today at Williams island, in the Bahama group, by the navy seaplane F-5-L, out of Miami. The F-5-L and four other naval planes were ordered out to search for the lost commercial plane by Commander Albert C. Read, of NC-4 fame, who arrived in Miami, Sunday, with the flotilla en route from Guantanamo bay, Cuba, to Hampton Roads.

First word of the finding of the plane was received a few minutes later by wireless from the F-5-L to the mine sweeper Sand Piper, mother ship of the fleet of planes at anchor in the harbor here.

All on board the Santa Maria were reported safe and well. The three passengers had gone on to Nassau by a small boat, while the two pilots and mechanician remained on the plane.

According to radio, the Santa Maria encountered unusually heavy winds on the trip out from Key West and was compelled to use so much gas in combatting the gale that it was forced down on Williams island at 1:30 Monday afternoon. It made a safe landing but, being without wireless no word of its plight could be sent out.

Washington, April 26.—A dispatch from the commandant of the naval station at Key West received at the navy department this afternoon said the missing commercial seaplane Santa Maria was proceeding to Miami in company with naval seaplane F-5-L, which located and gave aid to the passenger craft. The navy plane is commanded by Lieutenant H. D. Bartlett.

SCOURGE OF CRIME LOSES LAST FIGHT

thought of growing old and being a burden." So Nick Carter died.

Amazing Work.

Dey originated the Nick Carter character more than a quarter of a century ago. And for 20 years he did the most amazing literary work—real work—that was ever turned out by any writer of this or any other age. He wrote one Nick Carter story—20,000 words—a week. Fifty Nick Carter stories a year. A million words a year, and altogether 20,000,000 words. Nick's deeds of valor were written down in little lurid-covered novelettes with gaudy paper backs. They had a surprising circulation—far larger circulation than certain mothers and fathers may suppose.

They constituted the main features of the barn-and-haymow library. Numbers of them confiscated by school teachers would mount into hundreds of thousands.

Never Made Fortune.

Dey never made a fortune out of his writings. It is doubtful if he leaves very much property. But he had a lifetime of fun with his work and, as his friends said, remained a boy to the end of his life.

Of course, Dey wasn't the only man writing them at the time of their pronounced success. The demand was too great for the supply of one man, even such a prolific writer as Dey.

But to him went the glory of building Nick Carter's character and teaching others the thrills.

The Jefferson Davis Church At Montgomery, Alabama Has Mellotoned Walls

HALF a century before Montgomery, Alabama, was the first capital of the Confederacy, old St. Johns Church was built.

It was here that President Davis worshipped in those hey-days of the Confederacy, before the capital was removed to Richmond.

To it, visitors make pilgrimages to see the pew in which Jefferson Davis sat.

Its walls have recently been refinished, with Mellotone, giving that deep rich velvety effect so fitting in a building of its character.

Send for booklet called: "My Walls, what to Do With Them." It tells about the satin sheened Mello-Gloss as well as the popular velvety finish Mellotone.

Both Mellotone and Mello-Gloss come in a can and go on with a brush.

Both give a washable finish. Mello-Gloss having a semi-gloss, washes easiest.

ALLEGED DESERTER ESCAPES ARREST AFTER HOT CHASE

George M. Willis, alleged deserter from the United States marine corps, who is charged with having swindled the government out of several hundred dollars, escaped from the local recruiting station Wednesday while Sergeant Cassius Baumgras was calling for the police over the phone.

Willis has been applying at the various recruiting stations since he deserted in 1919 and securing transportation and expense money to carry him to the marine station at Paris Island, S. C., and instead of reporting at the station he uses the money for his own benefit, according to Sergeant Baumgras.

Willis became suspicious when the recruiting officer was using the phone. Willis was pursued but was lost sight of when he went through the Peachtree Arcade.

populace from having a good time. It's always been a fairly patent fact that the Druid Hills barbecue is the most important to Atlanta of the various entertainments of opera week.

And so it was Wednesday. There were no formalities. H. M. Atkinson, vice president of the Music Festival association, was around greeting the guests and looking at peace with all the world, just like the Municipal League of Georgia wasn't in existence, and Bob Maddox was helping, free from all care, because it was a bank holiday—as we say in that dear old England—anyhow, and it wasn't long before everybody had been off and the suspenders showing.

Bori and the Stew.

Mistake it not gentle reader—the artistic appetite does not revolt at such hearty comestibles as barbecued pork, and the artistic sense does not was just as informal as if the coats balk against gnawing on the rib of a barbecued lamb. I rather had an idea that opera artists lived on mocking bird tongues and chianti, but that was before I had seen Lucrezia Bori attack a bowl of brunswick stew and chase it down with the drink that made Atlanta plutocratic.

Anyhow, the barbecue was a huge success, despite the absence of suspenders, and all the artists were reported in good health and splendid spirits Wednesday night.

P. S.—I take it all back. Just as I was leaving Druid Hills in my palatial Arkwright electric, I saw a familiar form sitting in the shade of a big tree, enjoying barbecued meats as barbecued meats should be enjoyed. It was none other than Colonel William Lawson Peel, president of the Music Festival association, and his coat was hanging on a limb, and his suspender buckles were shining in the sun, and on his face was written that satisfaction that comes only when a man knows he is doing his work well. The old south still lives.

Numbers From "Pagliacci" To Be Presented by WGM

Only a few hours after the opera is ended at the auditorium this afternoon, radio enthusiasts all over the South will be able to hear selections from the opera, "I Pagliacci" this afternoon's presentation by the Metropolitan Opera company when WGM broadcasts at 9:15 o'clock some of the numbers from the opera, sung by Caruso, the immortal tenor; Amato and Lucrezia Bori, who is here this week in opera.

As on each previous night this week a short explanation of the acts and scenes in which the numbers occur in the opera will be given from WGM with all of the selections, so that the music will be thoroughly intelligible and all the more enjoyable to the thousands of people who will receive it by radio.

These condensed versions of the acts in "I Pagliacci" were prepared by H. R. Brown, manager of the Victrola department of the Cable Piano company, which is furnishing both the Victrola and Victor records to be broadcasted.

Some of the most interesting of all opera music is contained in "I Pagliacci." It is a play within a play; a play wherein a complete stage is set up on the stage in the second act. The whole theme is worked around the life of the player who must smile though his heart is breaking, because he is paid and the people must have their fun.

The famous "Prologue," sung by Amato, will open the opera presentation by WGM. Amato has long been recognized as one of the most effective singers in the role of "Tonio."

In the second selection by The Constitution, Lucrezia Bori sing "Ye Birds without Number," one of the delightful arias of "Nedda."

But the greatest of all these selections will be "Laugh Pagliacci," the famous 'Sob Song," presented in the silver tones of Enrico Caruso, who has often taken the role of "Canio" in Atlanta.

OLD SOUTH LAUDED IN ADDRESS MADE BY CARL HUTCHESON

Lauding the old south and its traditions and achievements, Carl Hutcheson, Atlanta attorney and member of the board of education, delivered the Memorial day oration for East Point Wednesday at a civic gathering held under the auspices of the Parent-Teacher association and the Junior Order United American Mechanics.

Comparing the present-day Ku Klux Klan with the klan of the post-bellum days, the speaker called its members "potential saviors of our republic." In the course of his remarks he expressed the hope that the day will come when a volume of the Bible is placed in every school room for daily reading.

"We defy the superstition, idolatry and skepticism, as is taught by the machinations of a certain sect, which is inimical to the public schools," he said.

Forms for Meeting Income and Profit Tax Returns Ready

Forms for making income and profits tax returns for corporations for the fiscal year ending 1922 may be had on request at the office of the collector of internal revenue, according to J. T. Rose, collector. In connection with the matter, the following statement was issued:

Attention is called to the fact that that portion of the fiscal year embraced in the year 1921 is payable at the old rate, and the remaining portion of the year embraced in 1922 will be at the new rate. Excess profit taxes have been repealed in so far as 1922 is concerned, but were in existence and must be taken into consideration for that part of the return embraced in 1921—the excess profit tax being in effect up to and including December 31, 1921.

"The last day for filing a return on a fiscal year basis is in all cases the fifteenth day of the third month following the close of the fiscal year. The penalty for failing to make a return on time is not more than $1,000 and an addition 25 per cent of the full amount of tax. Failing to pay when due, 5 per cent of the tax due plus interest at the rate of 1 per cent per month until paid, is the penalty.

"Each corporation is especially requested to preserve and have available for inspection by the revenue officers complete working papers showing the following:

"(a) The balance in each account on the corporation's books that was used in preparing schedule A.

"(b) The amount deducted from each balance on account of each class of non-taxable income, unallowable deductions, and other adjustments indicated in schedule L with a reference to the number of the item in schedule L in which each amount so deducted was included.

"(c) The remainder of each such balance, analyzed to show the amount included in each item of schedule A with a reference to the number of the item in schedule A in which each such amount was included.

CORNERSTONE LAID FOR DANIEL HOME

Hundreds Attend Odd Fellows' Great Celebration in Griffin Wednesday—Perry Speaks.

Griffin, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—Odd Fellows of the south were gathered in Griffin today. The occasion was the dedication of the Robert T. Daniel Memorial home, the laying of the cornerstone of that home, and the celebration of the founding of the order of Odd Fellows.

Visiting Odd Fellows began arriving in Griffin early Wednesday morning with the arrival of the special train from Columbus. Shortly afterwards the special from Atlanta arrived with many hundred members of the order. By noon the grounds surrounding the memorial home were crowded. A basket dinner was served.

Parade Staged.

Before the anniversary and the cornerstone laying ceremonies were held, there was a parade through the principal streets of Griffin. Bands from Macon, Columbus and Locust Grove furnished the music.

At 2 o'clock exercises were held. This was the one hundred and third anniversary of the founding of the order. These exercises were presided over by Milton J. Daniel, a brother of the late Robert T. Daniel, who at the time of his death was grand sire of the Odd Fellows of the world. Paul L. Lindsey, of Atlanta, was marshal of the day.

After the opening ceremonies, proclamations from the grand master of Georgia and the grand sire of the world were read. Judge Robert Cumming, of Griffin, welcomed the vast throng to the city, and Grand Representative R. L. Smith, of Commerce, replied on the part of the order. The presiding officers of the grand lodge of Georgia were then presented to the assembly, after which J. A. Perry, deputy grand master, delivered the principal address.

Praises Daniel.

The impressive ceremonies attending the dedication and the laying of the cornerstone of the Daniel Memorial home were in charge of Grand Master John S. Wilder, of Savannah. During these ceremonies extracts of speeches delivered by the late Grand Sire Daniel were read. The addresses during these exercises were delivered by Mrs. Gussie Tripple, president of the Rebecca assembly, and by Grand Master John S. Wilder.

In the address of the grand master he told of the great work that Judge Daniel did for the order while he was grand sire. He emphasized the loss sustained by the order when Judge Daniel died in Fitzgerald while addressing the grand lodge of Georgia.

SLIGHT SHOWER LATE IN EVENING, PREDICTED TODAY

Conditions favorable for a little rain are predicted for today, according to the weather report, although no heavy shower is expected. G. T. von Herrmann, the weather man, stated that opera-goers will probably not suffer any inconvenience on account of the shower which is expected to fall late this evening.

So far the storm which started in Texas, has progressed across the Missisippi valley, reaching Vicksburg Wednesday morning. Whether or not it will pass in the vicinity of Atlanta is still a matter of conjecture, Mr. von Herrmann stated.

The temperature for this morning will probably be around 70 degrees, advancing to 80 degrees during the day. Wednesday the mercury ranged between 64 and 75 degrees, so that today will probably be warmer.

FORECAST OF REPORT GIVEN BY ANDERSON

Washington, April 26.—Creation of regional departments of the interstate commerce commission, to adjudicate transportation controversies more swiftly and in the better light of local information upon issues presented will be urged in the forthcoming report of the congressional joint commission of agricultural inquiry, according to a statement today from Chairman Sidney Anderson. Better co-operation with state regulative commissions and less expense would be involved by the introduction of the system, according to the investigators.

The commission further will recommend larger appropriations for the commerce commission; an increase of its statistical work; the adoption by it more generally of rate levels associated with the comparative selling values of commodities; and defend the existing railroad practices of charging more for long hauls than for short hauls where competitive factors induce the step.

GEORGIA BARONESS LOSES DAMAGE SUIT

Judge George L. Bell Wednesday signed an order dismissing the suit of Baroness Rebie Rosenkrantz against stockholders of the Chattahoochee Brick company, alleging breach of contract and by this act ended litigation which has been carried on for five years. Baroness Rosenkrantz, former wife of James English, Jr., sued for $100,000 damages on account of the alleged breach of contract.

The supreme court recently rendered a decision in the case deciding in favor of the Chattahoochee Brick company and the order of Judge Bell was written in conformance to this decision.

The supreme court held that the baroness had no valid contract with the brick company stockholders, as claimed in her suit. She claimed that she should have succeeded her husband as vice president of the brick company and that failure of the stockholders to carry out an alleged contract to pay her an annual salary of $3,000 gave her a claim to damages.

FRANCE AT GENOA.

Called for the express purpose of devising ways and means to hasten the restoration of Europe and the reconstruction of Europe's war-shattered industries and business structure, the Genoa conference seems to have developed into little more than a political wrangle, with all the jockeying for position, the plotting and intrigue traditionally characteristic of European international politics; and it appears to be momentarily in danger of going on the rocks.

Its failure would occasion world-wide disappointment; and it would bring France into universal disrepute, for, as matters now stand, it is clear that the French attitude is the only serious stumbling block in the way of its complete success.

The conference was called for a commendable purpose, and, to all outward appearances at the time, it was entered into in good faith by each of the thirty-four participating nations.

But from the first fall of the gavel it has been apparent that France went to Genoa in the spirit of an aggrieved nation, "with a chip on her shoulder," seeking advantage and revenge, fired by hatreds left over from the war.

It was found, too, early in the conference, that Germany and Russia had entered into an economic and trade alliance that was calculated to disturb the even flow of events at Genoa. But from the beginning it has been France, not Russia nor Germany, that has endangered the conference, for, but for her unreasoning and vengeful attitude, there is little question that a peaceful and just solution to the economic problems of Europe would have been found, despite anything that Russia or Germany, or both of them together, might try to do to further their own ends without consideration for the welfare of the rest of the world.

In the light of subsequent events there seems little to fear from the Russo-German agreement — an agreement formulated and its announcement timed, it now appears, mainly for its strategic effect upon the conference rather than to prevent the development of a pan-European economic program at Genoa.

Without France, there would, of course, be considerable sparring and controversial differences between the various nations represented at the conference; but Great Britain, Italy, Germany, Russia and all the rest evidently went to Genoa to agree.

They realize that they need each other; that fundamentally their interests are mutual and in common, and lie in peace, not in war. They went to Genoa to agree and they want to agree.

But France has quibbled and objected from the first and seemed bent upon splitting hairs.

Lloyd George, the mainstay of the conference up to this time, has be known that his patience he French attitude has about d the breaking point.

British premier has warned rench delegates that what are re doing is endangering not e conference, but the peace world, and the very life of wn, now powerful, republic! H. Wickham Steed, editor of The ndon Times, and who is in perl daily attendance at the conce, said in one of his dis-atches the other day, that—

"Concerning with some of the delegates, Lloyd ... declared that if France by ... conference she would ... Gold ... pean which France is placing herself and the rest of continental Europe.

Lloyd George is fighting the diplomatic battle of his life to save France from herself and to save the conference, thus to avert the calamitous consequences of its dissolution in failure.

He has threatened to appeal directly to the "better sentiments" of the world if France continues to delay progress at Genoa; in which event there is no doubt that he will be able to marshal the support of everybody who loves peace and the square deal and who longs for a return of prosperity based upon international good will.

"THE OLD BRIGADES."

It was altogether appropriate to the occasion that in the exercises featuring the observance of Confederate Memorial day especial reference was made to the life and service of Jefferson Davis, and attention called to the movement to erect a monument in commemoration of the birth of the great Confederate president.

The reference to the patriotic devotion, the brilliant leadership and the valorous service of the immortal southern chieftain fitted beautifully into the program prepared and carried out under the auspices and direction of the Confederate Memorial association and the Daughters of the Confederacy, while the entire community paused for the day in reverence of the departed heroes of the stirring days of the "'60's," and to pay loving tribute of respect, not only to the memory of the dead, but also to the living veterans who wore the gray.

Memorial day is essentially a day of devotion and of dedication—a day that grows more sacred with time, its observance each succeeding year reminding us of the increasing rapidity with which the ranks of the living are diminishing as their aged and honored members one by one respond to the bugle-call from the Other Side.

The impressive exercises in Atlanta yesterday, the parade and the services at Oakland cemetery, called to mind the lines by Frank L. Stanton, inspired by a Memorial day parade some years ago, before the gray lines were as thin, even, as they are today:

"The old brigades march slower now—the boys who wore the gray,
But there's life and battle-spirit in a host of them today!
They hear their comrades calling from the white tents, far away,
And answer to the ringing roll of 'Dixie!'"

THE DEADLY CROSSING.

Vice President H. W. Miller, of the Southern railway, has announced, says a Washington dispatch, "that owing to the large number of casualties that are occurring on grade crossings each month and to assist further in community safety, the Southern will enter whole-heartedly in the careful crossing campaign which will be conducted throughout the country during the summer months."

It is to be hoped that every other railroad system in the country will follow the Southern in its attitude toward this proposed nation-wide movement to reduce the deplorable human life toll that is exacted each year by the deadly grade crossing.

The intersections of railroad and highway are constant sources of danger to life and limb, and scrupulous care on the part of vehicle drivers alone can make them even reasonably safe.

The motorist who is constantly thoughtful of his safety and that of his passengers, and who heeds the time-honored and wise injunction to "stop, look, listen" before driving onto a railroad track is the one most likely to reach his destination.

All users of the highways should constantly bear in mind the truth that "eternal vigilance" at grade crossings is the price of human life.

Until they do that, the railroad grade crossings will continue to claim their annual quota of precious humanity, despite all the physical safeguards that can be erected.

The grade crossing hazard can be reduced to the vanishing point; but that happy development can be brought about only by a protracted and intensive campaign of education.

For such a campaign as that proposed for the coming summer to be successful, requires co-operation between the public and the railroads—co-operation such as that promised on behalf of the Southern by its vice president.

Candidates for office who think they have a call to "save the country," needn't hurry. The June graduates will relieve them of all that work.

Russia has been complaining of "infringements," but she doesn't mind 'em when they come in the bread-wagon way.

So many optimistic people are curious to see where this great old world is going, Conan Doyle can't persuade them that "death is joy-

Sorrow comes into the lives of us all—
Still we are drifting along!
Life must be sweet, for it holds us in thrall
When Mollie is singin' a song.

Still the wild flowers climb over the wall—
Right will rise white over wrong.
Talk about life with its honey an' gall—
Molly is singin' a song!

Thorns where the glad roses throng,
All o' my troubles—they vanish away:
Molly is singin' a song.

Faith in the future grows strong;
Love, with a gentle, sweet whisper of rest;
Molly is singin' a song!

"We're livin' in a Christian age, where courtesy's required—and when I meet a sore-head bear, with constant growl and rumpled hair, it makes me awful tired.

CARUSO'S VOICE

(A Memory.)

My soul, sometimes, in daring mood aspires
The mysteries of the heavens to penetrate,
Soaring beyond the eternal astral fires,
She stops at last before heaven's open gate;
Ineffable glory there shines on my sight,
And rapture inexpressible is mine,
Concentral splendors of all starry light.
Reveal heaven's temple with its holy shrine;
A blinding splendor makes my soul's sight dim,
In swoonlike rest fain would she fold the wing,
For, lo! in shining ranks the Seraphim
Come forth, in praise of God their songs to sing,
Then hush they when, supremely glorious, rings
One seraph's matchless voice—Caruso sings!

(From Manchester Guardian Weekly)

Lecturing on "Earth Movements" at the Royal Institution Prof. J. W. Evans said many interesting things that will be new to the laity. He explained that the surface of the earth is in a continual state of movement. Besides the passage of earthquake waves the surface is continually being traversed by a succession of minor vibrations called microseisms. These pass any given point at fairly regular intervals of between five and eight seconds, and have been recorded far inland in Russia and Germany.

Mr. J. J. Shaw of West Bromwich has also obtained records of them in England. It is now fairly well-established that these earth ripples are vibrations produced by the arrival of Atlantic rollers on exposed coastlines several hundred miles away.

Professor Evans explained that earthquake waves travel not only on the earth's surface, but that they also dive and take short cuts through it. Study of the velocities and behavior of earthquake waves has led to the conclusion that the earth is built round a hard central core 4,000 miles in diameter, composed of a heavy material, probably iron and nickel.

Seen and Heard in Washington

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON

Washington, April 26.—(Special.) Don't assume, gentle reader, that because the world war foreign debt commission—I believe that's the name of it—has organized, and in the parlance of the street, "gotten down to business," this government is going to collect any appreci ble portion of that twelve billion dollars due it any time soon.

Not on your life!

Fact is, it is doubtful—framed up as is the commission—that it will ever actually collect any of it.

It may sometime, and through some process of having the obligations evidenced by bonds, be able to collect some of the interest; and perhaps be able to carry, due to such evidences of indebtedness, in the asset column of this government's financial statement, the "items" as liquid, or acceptable resources.

But in plain English, with the vaguely possible exception of the debt of Great Britain, the other nations obligated to the United States do not expect at any time soon, if ever, to pay any substantial amounts on the principal, and not even upon the accruing interests if they can possibly escape doing so.

It's a problem that our children's children will be wrestling with, unless, in the meanwhile, in the changing tides of a popular government, we get tired of sending good money after bad, and kiss the whole thing goodbye, and forget about it.

That is very likely what will happen sooner or later.

And all of this talk about paying a soldier bonus from the proceeds of foreign debt refunding is buncombe, pure and simple.

In the exigencies of party politics—to which every governmental influence, unfortunately, bows—it is not improbable that the majority in congress may seek to fool the people into believing that the proposed bonus demand upon the treasury can be met by some refunding scheme, taking Great Britain as a basis, because she is the richest and most resourceful debtor, and holds her credit standing more sacredly than do the others.

But that will be politics—nothing but politics.

If it were not congressional election year such tomfoolery would not be thought of.

As it is—any port in a storm!

This government faces a deficit in 1922-23 of $350,000,000, admittedly; nearer $750,000,000, actually.

Don't be misled into believing this deficit, plus the soldier bonus demand, can be met without increasing the burden of federal taxation, that is even now straining the nation's industrial and commercial interests—every interest, indeed—to a point where it is crushing—yea, assassinating and annihilating.

It am not opposed to the soldier bonus, but I am placing the red lantern upon the danger points that so-called political expediency is seeking to cover up.

* * * *

Now as to this world war foreign debt commission, and its supposed activities:

It is composed of Secretary Mellon, Secretary Hughes, Secretary Hoover, Senator Smoot and Congressman Burton.

Not a democrat in the bunch!

That's all right, perhaps. I do not impugn thehonesty nor the motives of any member on the board, all of whom are men of unimpeachable integrity; but on the very face of it, is it not plain to any unbiased citizen that the board will play republican party politics with the question, reconciling campaign and "off-year" conditions to meet the demands of political expediencies?

Why, certainly!

The refunding of the foreign debt of $12,000,000,000—$100 per capital for every man, woman and child in America—is no "party" matter. It strikes at the hearthstone of every home in the country. Then why could not a representative instead of a partisan board have been appointed?

Anyway, pass that up!

Now what is proposed? The commission has opened offices in the treasury department and one of the rim-glassed, frock-coated assistant secretaries—also a republican—has been made the executive secretary, and Secretary Mellon, of the treasury, thus sets about to "refund" the debts.

By first making a long, tedious survery of the financial conditions of each debtor nation; the census of the people; their rehabilitation; the nations' other indebtedness; their ability to pay, now or forever—and the Lord knows how much other "information," the gathering of which, through diplomatic channels, will run up into the months, and perhaps years.

That's the activity program. There are 18 debtor nations thus to be dealt with.

The law creating the commission provided this and that—mostly that—and it would make the average novice to the Washington game think that the government would have the $12,000,000,000 in hand before fall.

Forget it!

The obligations of the foreign governments are of four sources—those held for advances made under the various liberty bond acts, $9,434,774,829.24; those received from the secretary of war and the secretary of the navy on account of sales of surplus war materials, $574,673,710.21; those received from the American Relief administration, $84,093,963.55, and those held by the United States Grain corporation, $56,858,802.49, a total of $10,150,401,305.49. The interest accrued and unpaid up to and including the last interest period upon these obligations amounted to $1,178,879,925.88, and with the added interest since become due probably would total nearly $1,500,000,000.

The obligations of foreign countries held for advances made under the liberty bond acts are those of eleven countries, in round numbers, as follows: Belgium, $347,000,000; Cuba, $8,575,000; Czechoslovakia, $61,250,000; France, $2,950,700,000; Great Britain $4,166,300,000; Greece, $15,000,000; Italy, $1,648,000,000; Liberia, $26,000; Rumania, $23,200,000; Russia, $187,700,000; Serbia, $26,175,000.

With regard to the obligations held for the sale of surplus war materials, some of the same nations are debtors, and also Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania and Poland. The obligations received from the American Relief Administration and those held by the United States Grain corporation add still other nations to the list of debtors, as follows: Armenia, Austria and Hungary.

Heavens, but we are a liberal people:

BITS OF NEW YORK LIFE

BY O. O. M'INTYRE

New York, April 27.—A new wave of intellectualism is sweeping the cliff dwellers. No week is complete without at least one erudite dip into higher things. "Serious thinking" done on the premises—so to speak. The host invites the boobery and dazzles them with mighty intellects.

And the mighty intellects have the hard instinct. Just call one and they'll all be there—thirsting for knowledge and other things. The obese lady with a flock of chins, directoire gowns and girlish laughter. She comes to America—from Iowa—with a mission "to make the world sing." She has no pity.

Did you see the notice about her son, you know the English actor, in Variety? The pride of the continent and boon companion of Wales. After a few cocktails you learn it was not Variety. But the Times. If you don't sing, she'll make you do-re-mi before all the people.

The antique collector is there too. You learn that the lack of knowledge about epochs in America is not only appalling but stupendous. He tells with moist eyes of a man living at the Ritz who knew nothing of the Jacobean period. Fancy! Indeed—one must be broad-minded—a couple of fancys!

Then the piano wizard. She brings teacher, distinguished by long hair, a racing Adam's Apple and also a thirst. He refers to his pupil quaintly as "Miss Paderwiski." She, like the moving picture industry, is just in her infancy. The Peter Pan of pianists.

"Play that little thing that Albert liked so well at your graduation in Brussels" teacher implores. You know Al. King and all that sort of rot. And she begins. If you happen to be in the next room you imagine she is tearing the piano apart—limb by limb—and with a final crescendo hurling it out the window.

No applause. Just a chorus of "Bravos!" To applaud indicates you were raised in Galliopolis. The Futurists and Dadaists are present too. Chatting about "feeling for space," "wrong perspectives" and perhaps "sweet daddies." Mighty ponderous. O very! And all the while the host beams and shakes the silver shaker. He is filled with insular educational pretensions. His cousin was a Rhodes scholar.

The snows are over. Summer is here for the balloon man is walking the paves. He is old and gnarled but he wears a halo of youth. Children love him and his gayly colored spheres. In the distance comes the hurdy gurdy refrain "The Good Old Summer Time." From the bus top the avenue shop windows glow with spring colors. And in Madison Square is the smell of the circus housed in the Garden. Yep, summer is here. All but the Bock Beer signs.

One of the hold-up men—there are three or four in town it appear—"stuck up" the New York Tribune the other day. The cashier's assistant has had no training in a school of journalism. After the robbery she called up the city editor. "Please send some one down here, it is so lonely" she said. "Whadda you mean lonely?" asked the C. E. "Well the cashier is unconscious from the blow that robber hit him and there's no one else about and—." The city editor swooned also.

Very few actors and actresses escaped a 25 per cent cut in salary last week. Only in this way could producers continue during the slump. There seems to be no explanation for the lack of business. "People are simply not going to the theatres" said the head of one of the largest syndicates.

MEMORIAL DAY

(In honor of the members of the memorial associations of our state.)

Treasured deep in her woman's heart,
Sacred, she guards this day apart.
Precious to her—she holds it fast
As a keepsake of the hallowed past.

She gathered blossoms from garden and field—
Buds and blossoms, whose perfume doth yield
Incense pure from her soul to God,
As she leaves them on the battle-sod.

Today is hers. It speaks for years
Of love and sacrifice—smiles and tears.
The wreath in her heart will not decay—
It is her keepsake—Memorial Day!

Since I have given thee all my very heart,
Since I have staked so deep and dangerously
All that I have of hope till breath depart

I am thy prisoner; yes, and thou the free.

Pigeon Found Dead At Fairmont Hotel Thought a Carrier

What is supposed to be a carrier pigeon was found dead in the yard of the Hotel Elrod at Fairmont, Ga., Saturday morning, by Mrs. C. Rogers, she informed The Constitution Wednesday. The pigeon was found to have a gold band around a foot on which was engraved the initials, "G. T. T.," and a silver band on the other on which was inscribed "B. O. 9791."

Mrs. Rogers believes it to be a lost pigeon of the carrier variety which became injured in some way during its flight. It was first seen about the middle of the week, fluttering around the hotel.

Further information concerning the pigeon, which is brown and white in color, may be secured from Mrs. Rogers, in care of the Hotel Elrod.

THE FOLLY OF CATCHING TYPHOID.

As most intelligent people know, typhoid fever, which was such a terrible scourage among our troops at the time of the Spanish-American disgrace, was practically unknown in the medical history of the world war, thanks to the compulsory immunization of every man with bacteria commonly called "typhoid vaccine."

Just how long the immunizing effect of this bacteria lasts is still uncertain, but we know from various observations that the protective effect lasts at least three years.

There could scarcely be a more convincing demonstration of the great remedial value of vaccines and serums than the complete statistics thus presented by the United States government authorities:

Deaths from typhoid fever in the world war, 213.

Deaths that would have occurred had the civil war rate obtained, 51,133.

Deaths that would have occurred had the Sapnish war rate obtained, 68,164.

The immunization conferred by the hypodermic injection of typhoid bacteria (measured numbers of the typhoid bacilli killed by heat) is only relative, not absolute. Of 4,000,000 troops immunized, 213 succumbed to typhoid fever nevertheless, and there were only 2,328 cases of typhoid fever treated in the army during the entire war. The immunization is only relative, but so is the immunization against smallpox conferred by vaccination and the immunization against diptheria conferred by toxin-antitoxin and the immunization against thieves conferred by pocket or household artillery.

Protection against typhoid fever is worth having in civil life, particularly by these classes:

1. Nurses and pupil nurses and nurses' aids.
2. Commercial travelers who visit small towns or rural districts.
3. Families planning to go to the country on vacation.
4. Everybody in a community where typhoid fever is epidemic.
5. All persons who have been or are likely to be in close association or contact with one ill of typhoid fever.
6. All persons who drink water from shallow wells within shout of human habitation, or from any water supply system that is not vouched for by the local health department.

The prophylactic is usually administered in three small doses, ordinary hypodermic injections, about a week apart. Only exceptionally is there a day of malaise or headache after the first dose; as a general rule there is no discomfort associated with being immunized. Every doctor employs this protective immunization, and if you are included in any of the classes mentioned it would be wise for you to avail yourself of this protection now.

THE END OF THINGS.

There are those who dread to face mold age. I am not one of them. To me, the end of my days is something to look forward to with distilled pleasure.

There is so much of beauty in the end of thnigs.

I am a lover of art. And I am reminded of the titles of so many of my treasured pictures. Here are some of them as they come to me from the framed friends throughout my home: "Twilight," "Evening," "The End of the Day," "Sunset," "Autumn," "Moonrise," "The Falling Leaves."

There is to the end of things a satisfying sense of completeness.

He only need fear the end of things who has not done—or at least attempted to do—his best.

And he who never thinks of the end of things, as of himself, waters his soul with the drink of Eternity.

How many a man has come to the end of his strength in the midst of great achievement, only to utter: "So much yet to do!"

The wisest of us all sleep in ignorance.

The simplest truths and facts of science are just beginning to be opened up to us. Though for thousands of years they have been as close to us as the air we breathe.

H. G. Wells, who recently visited America, left with a drooping head. To him it looks as though New York City is doomed—that its decay has already set in. And this seems to me the way he looked at much in the entire world.

But this evening I walked out into my yard and stood, thinking, on at rock that is probably much older than any so-called civilization on the earth.

There is really no end anywhere. What dies is but a phase of some newer and better development.

What is olive oil taken internally for?—(Mrs. G. I. L.)

Answer—As a food, olive oil being rather inferior to butter and animal fat; as a laxative; and sometimes to slow or inhibit digestion in conditions in which there is an increased secretion of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. Huge doses of olive oil or some substitute oil have been taken by many gullible persons under the delusion that some such oil will cure gallstone disease, which of course is not so.

Atlanta Plan Is People's Charter, Says Committee

Statement Is Given Out in Which Efforts to Cloud the Issue Are Charged.

That the Atlanta plan has long since "ceased to be Mr. Watkins' charter," but the people's charter and has not been changed since its publication on April 15, is the contention made by the Atlanta plan charter campaign committee in a statement issued Wednesday.

The statement is as follows:

"The Atlanta plan charter campaign committee wishes to make the statement that when Mr. Watkins presented his charter to council in January he publicly announced that it was his purpose that the charter lie on the table some months in order that the public might have an opportunity to make suggestions and to criticise the charter.

"Mr. Watkins said it was not his purpose to give Atlanta a charter but to aid the people in securing the kind of charter they wanted.

Showed Good Faith.

"Mr. Watkins showed his good faith to the people of Atlanta by adopting suggestions made by many different organizations and writing these suggestions into his charter. Some of the organizations and individuals from which he accepted suggestions were: The Atlanta Federation of Trades; the chairman of the state library commission; members of the Parent-Teachers association; members of the board of education; Drs. Engelhardt and Strayer; an officer in the Atlanta Art association; the men's campaign advisory committee; the League of Women Voters; Mayor's charter committee and other individuals. The Atlanta plan has long ceased to be Mr. Watkins' charter and is the people's charter.

"At the meeting of council at which the resolution to submit the three charters to the voters of Atlanta was passed, Mr. Nutting, who introduced the resolution, took the revised charter in his hand and asked council if it would accept the amended edition as the Atlanta plan charter. It was adopted. This action was witnessed by many members of the Atlanta plan charter campaign who were present. This revised edition was printed in The Atlanta Journal on April 15 and has not been changed.

Seek to Cloud Issue.

"The whole question of amendments in the opinion of the Atlanta plan charter campaign committee, has been brought forward to cloud the real issue. It will cause many people to recall to mind the advice an experienced lawyer gave to his young son just after the son was admitted to the bar. He said, 'My son, when you have a poor case with all the law and facts against you, cuss the other side and maybe the jury will forget the facts and side with you.'

"The Atlanta plan charter campaign committee has confidence in the people and believes that they will know when the wool is being pulled over their eyes whether by a statement that the Atlanta plan charter is in a 'state of flux,' or by a discussion of 'Hemlockers' or by any of the numberless other irrelevant matters being brought forward."

CREDIT MEN PLANNING DRIVE FOR MEMBERS

A committee representing the Atlanta Credit Men will canvass the city Thursday in an effort to increase the membership of the association, in conformity with "membership day," which will be observed in all parts of the country by associations affiliated with the National Association of Credit Men.

Members of the committee stated Wednesday that the goal of new members for the local association has been placed at 250 and they expect to annex that many before sunset Thursday. Headquarters of the committee has been established in the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce building.

The Atlanta membership already numbers about 225 and the quota set for this city is 250. The campaign has been on for several weeks, but the final returns must be in Wednesday and when the fight is over the figures will be wired to New York, where the national membership committee will be in session checking up the results.

When J. H. Tregoe, national secretary, was in Atlanta the first of the year, he paid the local organization many compliments on the splendid work which it had done in the past, and declared that "no body of men in the United States among the 33,000 members of the national association is held in higher esteem by the officers at headquarters than Atlanta's group of safe and sane credit men."

Brief Georgia News

Catching Many Fish.

Albany, Ga., April 26.—(Special.) Fishermen of Albany and vicinity have been making some remarkable catches during the past week, owing to an unusual combination of circumstances.

Kinchafoonee and Muckalee creeks, which unite two miles above Albany, and, after flowing a distance of a half mile together, pour their waters into Flint river, are two of the finest fishing streams in Georgia. Natural conditions for good fishing were greatly improved some years ago when a dam was built to impound the waters of the creeks for a power plant, and the streams have long been a fisherman's paradise.

Nearly two weeks ago the gates of the dam were opened in order to run off the water to enable the G., S. W. & G. railroad to make repairs to its bridge, which is a short distance above the dam. This let the waters of Kinchafoonee and Muckalee back into their natural banks for the first time in about 17 years. A great many fish were carried through the gates into the river, but enough remained to cause the waters within the natural banks fairly to teem with black bass, bream, perch and other food fish.

Urge Women to Register.

Albany, Ga., April 26.—(Special.) The women of Dougherty county are being appealed to to register. Mrs. R. D. Mills, chairman of the women's democratic executive committee, has issued a statement urging women to go to the office of the tax collector and qualify for participation in this year's elections.

She explains the requirements of the registration law, and reminds the women that many important questions probably will come before the voters of the county before the end of the year. As the registration book will close on May 6, it is urged that the women register without delay.

In the exciting municipal campaign of last year, the women of Albany registered in large numbers, and more than 95 per cent of those who registered voted. They took a lively interest in the campaign, and it was their votes that decided the issue.

Masonic Convention.

Rome, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—The twenty-fifth annual Masonic convention of the 7th district, which will be held here May 2 and May 3, will have Governor T. W. Hardwick as the chief speaker, it was announced this afternoon.

Other speakers will be Grand Master Bowdoin, of Georgia; Grand Master Spearman, of Alabama; Past Grand Master Napier, of Georgia and Colonel James M. Troutt, of Fort Oglethorpe. A lengthy and elaborate program has been arranged for ladies' night, May 4. Past Grand Master Max Meyerhardt, head of the convention, will preside and will be among the speakers at ladies' night at the city auditorium when a great audience is expected. Grand Lecturer Guy H. Thurman, of Atlanta, will exemplify the work of the order.

Inspect Pastures.

Tifton, Ga., April 26.—(Special.) Fourteen farmers from Turner county, headed by George T. Betts, of Ashburn, motored to Tifton yesterday to inspect the experiments in clovers and pasture grasses. The experiments are being conducted at the coastal experiment station. Turner planters are very much interested in dairying in connection with its creamery, and pastures are essential to cheap production of milk. The problem for the live stock men in this section is an all-the-year-around pasture grass, and experiments on this line have been under way at the station here since its establishment two years ago.

Barrow to Speak.

Monticello, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—D. C. Barrow, chancellor of the University of Georgia, will speak to the P.-T. A., in Monticello on May 5, on educational conditions in the state.

Adourns Court.

Sylvester Ga., April 26.—(Special.) Having been requested by the board of commissioners and others, not to hold the April term of Worth superior court, for the reason that the jail was practically clear and no cases of much importance on docket and the fact that the farmers are so much needed in their crops, Judge R. Eve came from Tifton this morning and adjourned court for the term.

The last city court having been adjourned for the term and no superior court this term leaves Worth county free of courts for about half the year.

Church Opened.

Sylvester, Ga., April 26.—(Special.) The new $75,000 Baptist church, of Sylvester, was opened formally yesterday with union services last night, and revival services will continue through this and next week.

Hog Sale.

Barnesville, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—On Monday, May 8, farmers of Lamar county will sell a carload of hogs at Barnesville. Since the appearance of the boll weevil, farmers of that section have diversified extensively and many co-operative sales of farm products have been pulled off. Recently a carload of chickens was sold at Barnesville. Farmers of the county are organizing to sell their surplus produce in carload lots and many carloads of hogs, chickens and other produce will be shipped out of the county this season.

Unusual Disease.

Americus, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—Milton Williams, negro, died at his home here yesterday morning of an unusual disease. Physicians who examined him declared his ailment to be soleroderma, one of the most unusual in medical annals. Death was due directly to strangulation, caused by hardenng and contraction of the muscles and tissues about the negro's throat. Williams was well enough to go uptown Saturday, although his flesh in various parts of his body even then was so hard as to prevent the incision of a hypodermic needle.

Hold Corn, Is Advice.

Americus, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—"Hold your corn and sell it for a dollar a bushel—on the hoof," is the advice George O. Marshall is giving Sumter county farmers. This advice is based upon the result of the feed test just concluded here. A number of hogs fed by Marshall 50 days gained 4,650 pounds, the feed used being 358 bushels of corn and 1,000 pounds tankage. For each pound of corn fed, the hogs gained 4.31 pounds, and for tankage, .21 was gained for each pound consumed.

The gain per day for each hog during the feeding period was 1.4 pounds, and the cost of tankage $60 per ton. The weight of the entire lot at the beginning of the feeding period was 10,025 pounds, which compares with 14,675 pounds at its completion.

In computing the profit as a result of the test, Marshall allowed no premium for "hard meat," such as is generally paid by packers for corn-fed hogs in this market.

Would Open Market.

Americus, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—An organization to purchase diversified farm products is being promoted by the Americus and Sumter County Chambers of Commerce. Americus business men and farmers engaged in diversified farming will be asked to furnish money with which to finance the enterprise.

George O. Marshall, secretary of the chamber, in announcing the plan today, asserted there had been a call from merchants and farmers alike for a stable marketing medium for general farm products here.

Man's Sentence Cut by Hardwick Despite Protest

Macon, Ga., April 26.—(Special.) Governor Hardwick's secretary today notified Attorney John R. Cooper, of Macon, that the sentence of one year imposed on J. L. Hamlin, a traveling salesman, for alleged attempted criminal assault on a young woman of Valdosta has been reduced to a fine of $350. Hamlin paid the fine and was released after serving three weeks.

The trial of Hamlin attracted much attention in south Georgia several months ago. He and another man were alleged to have escorted two young women to a resort near Quitman to a dance and on the way home Hamlin was alleged to have attacked the young woman he was accompanying. He denied the assault charge and an effort was made to show that the characters of the women were questionable. The jury, however, found him guilty and fixed the punishment at one year.

The case was carried to the court of appeals and lost there and then was certiorarried to the supreme court and also lost there. The prison commission later recommended commutation to present service upon the payment of the $350 fine and the recommendation was approved by Governor Hardwick.

Judge W. E. Thomas, who presided at the trial of Hamlin, opposed the commutation and wrote a strong letter to Governor Hardwick. Roland Ellis and Dr. O. C. Gibson, of Macon, aided Attorney Cooper in gaining the action of the governor.

Hamlin has resumed his position on the road.

NewHydroPower Plant Is Opened At Bainbridge

Bainbridge, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—Bainbridge observed memorial day Wednesday with appropriate exercises which were featured by opening the Bainbride Power company's new hydro-electric plant.

Two years ago, a few of the city's business men conceived the idea of harnessing the power going to waste in Sprink creek, about twelve miles from Bainbridge. The project immediately gained momentum. Surveys were made, the Bainbridge Power company was organized and the business people of Bainbridge subscribed for the entire amount of the capital stock of $200,000.

The work of building the dam and erecting the power house rapidly went forward to completion. The plant has a minimum capacity of eighteen hundred horsepower or about three times more than enough to supply the needs of Bainbridge.

There are several other towns in this section desirous of being supplied with power from this plant but the company has decided to sell all the excess power to the Atlantic Refining company, a fullers earth mining plant located at Attapulgus, about twelve miles below Bainbridge.

ADVANCES THEORY OF FOUL PLAY IN DISAPPEARANCE

Thomasville, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—Sheriff Gordon Davis has returned from North Carolina where he went to investigate the disappearance of his brother-in-law, E. R. Shepard, of Putney, who was last heard of at Lumberton, N. C., more than ten days ago. His suit case, marked with his name and other things, were found in his car, which had been left near the Lumberton river with the lights burning, but with nothing to indicate what had become of Shepard.

Mr. Davis said he was certain that there was foul play connected with the disappearance of Mr. Shepard and found some clues in the matter but nothing sufficiently certain to warrant any arrests.

DR. OPPITZ GOES TO HOWARD COLLEGE

Rome, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—Dr. Louis K. Oppitz, who recently resigned the professorship of physics at Shorter college has been unanimously elected to the headship of a similar department at Howard college, Birmingham, Ala. Dr. Oppitz begins his services at Howard with the opening of the summer school in June.

SMALL DAMAGE DONE BY DECATUR ST. FIRE

The barber shop of C. N. Hutson, located at 67 Decatur street was damaged to the extent of $1,500 Wednesday afternoon by fire which was caused by the explosion of the water heater. The shoe shop of M. Pollock at 69 Decatur street also was slightly damaged.

There was no insurance on the fixtures in the barber shop although the loss of $500 sustained by H. M. Grant, owner of the building, was covered by insurance. Fireman had little trouble in extinguishing the flames.

Riley to Fight For Life Before Prison Board

Albany, Ga., April 26.—(Special.) The only hope of Ludie Riley, one of the two white men now in Dougherty county jail under sentence of death, is in the state pardon board and the governor. The supreme court finds nothing irregular in Riley's conviction in Dougherty superior court of one of the most hideous crimes in the criminal annals of this section, and the lower court is affirmed. He was resentenced today to hang on June 23.

But a strong fight will be made through the pardon board for Riley's life. There have already been circulated in the county petitions asking for clemency, and these have been signed by a number of persons. It is understood that the members of the jury which convicted Riley are among the signers.

Riley was convicted of assaulting a 10-year-old white girl within the city limits of Albany. The child was in a pitiful condition when found by her mother, and her testimony at Riley's trial could not be shaken. The accused man was under the influence of liquor when arrested shortly after the crime. He has stoutly denied his guilt.

Glenn Moore Hudson, whose case is one of the best known in the state, has ben under deat' sentence nearly seven months for the murder of his two little stepsons, Robert and Isaiah Temple. His case is now in the supreme court, and the condemned man anxiously awaits report of that tribunal's finding. His wife, whose trial and acquittal closely followed his own conviction, has left the vicinity, and her whereabouts are not known. She accused Hudson of the murder of her children, but was forbidden under Georgia law to testify at his trial.

There has been but one execution of a white man in the history of Dougherty county, W. J. Glaser, a watchmaker, having been hanged nearly 30 years ago for the murder of his wife.

PROBE PLANNED TODAY OF CHARGES OF GRAFT

Graft charges hinted at by C. H. Lapsley, of the accounting firm of C. H. Lapsley & Co., in connection with bids submitted to audit the city of Atlanta's books, are to occupy the council finance committee's attention at a special meeting this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Councilman J. R. Seawright, chairman of the committee, has written a letter to Mr. Lapsley, inviting him before the body, and declared that if a member of the council is involved in irregularities he should be expelled.

In reply Mr. Lapsley wrote the following communication:

Your letter of April 25, extending me the courtesy of a hearing before the finance committee at the meeting to be held Thursday, April 27, at 2 p. m., is received.

The purpose of my appearance, as stated in your letter, would be, not to consider the bids for audit of the city accounts, but other irrelevant and extraneous matter.

In my letter of April 22, I pointed out the following reprehensible features of the bid approved by the subcommittee of the finance committee:

1. Per diem rates without limit as to maximum charge;

2. Per diem rates higher than rates quoted by other reputable and efficient accounting firms.

This is a fact, and the bids on file with you are the admissible evidence and the conclusive proof of this assertion.

I would suggest that your committee refuse all bids and then pass upon the qualifications of the firm recommended by the subcommittee as the only accounting firm qualified to submit a bid or handle the audit. Why have competitive bids?

TABLET UNVEILED TO JOE WHEELER IN DECATUR SQUARE

Decatur, Ga., April 26.—(Special.) From the standpoint of attendance as well as from that of the character of the exercises, the most notable memorial day celebration in the history of Decatur was staged here today. Agnes Lee chapter, U. D. C., had charge of the program, which was featured by the unveiling of a tablet erected to the memory of General Joe Wheeler.

The tablet is mounted on a huge granite boulder set on the courthouse grounds. It was unveiled by Miss Annie Wheeler, of Washington, D. C., daughter of the great cavalry leader. Dedicatory addresses were made by former Mayor W. J. Dabney, speaking for the former city administration, and J. M. Hall, for the present board of commissioners, and the response was delivered by Mrs. James A. Campbell, chairman of the memorial committee of the local U. D. C. chapter.

The ceremonies, participated in also by about 40 Confederate veterans, half of them "Wheeler's men," and by a large group of little girls, Children of the Confederacy, was preceded by a memorial day address by James L. Mayson, of Atlanta, and an address by Miss Wheeler, delivered at a meeting held in the court room, over which G. W. Glausier, city superintendent of schools, presided. There were also appropriate exercises at the Decatur cemetery.

Amendment Accepted.

Washington, April 26.—The senate amendment to the postoffice appropriation bill providing $1,900,000 for continuing the transcontinental airplane rail service was accepted late today by the house conferees on the measure.

TANLAC HEARING SET FOR TODAY

Judge W. D. Ellis, of the Fulton superior court, Wednesday announced a postponement until Thursday of the hearing of litigation in which control of International Proprietaries, Inc., the Tanlac concerns, is involved. The postponement was granted at the request of attorneys for S. A. Lynch, theatrical magnate, who is contending with S. C. Satterwait and P. C. McDuffie, for control of the voting strength of a block of common stock in the company.

Attorney Luther Z. Rosser, representing Mr. Lynch, asked for an extension of time on the ground that the attorneys had not had time to write out certain testimony of Lynch and Satterwait given at a private session of lawyers and clients held Tuesday afternoon. Reuben R. Arnold, representing Satterwait and McDuffie, announced he was ready for trial in the case, and that he wanted to go into all details of the case as to Satterwait's and McDuffie's interests in the matter.

The litigation in the fight was made by Satterwait and McDuffie to prevent Lynch from transferring the voting strength of 17,500 shares of stock, which, it is alleged, is owned jointly by Lynch and Satterwait. Lynch, McDuffie and Satterwait own virtually all of the stock of the Tanlac company, Lynch holding 95,000 shares and Satterwait and McDuffie owning 95,000 shares, making a total owned by the three of 190,000 of the 200,000 shares.

Judge Ellis announced that he would postpone the case until Thursday, when it is expected that all details of the transaction will be brought to light.

He Loved Her Madly —Until He Kissed Her

SUCH beauty and charm! He thought he loved her until — and then the great disillusionment. No, he could never forgive that — an unpleasant breath. The romance was gone. Yet how different it would have been had she only known! For no longer is there any excuse for a disagreeable breath. Steroline, used morning and evening, will overcome most cases instantly. Steroline is highly antiseptic, delightfully pleasant, and leaves the mouth cool, sweet and free from any trace of mouth odors. Fine for tonsilitis and sore throat. Plans Perfected For "Own Your Home" Exhibit

Plans have been perfected by the Atlanta Real Estate board, which is sponsoring the "Own Your Own Home" exposition at the Auditorium during the week beginning May 8, to make this affair one of the most interesting and successful of any ever undertaken by the board, according to Ward Wight, president.

At 8 o'clock Tuesday evening, May 9, a meeting is planned at the Auditorium which will be a part of the "Business Men and Taxpayers' day" and at which a number of 20-minute speeches from prominent business men and women will be a feature. This part of the program is incomplete at the present time, but will be announced at a later date, Mr. Wight stated.

C. J. Haden, widely known business man, who has devoted considerable study to the proposed state income tax plan, which will be introduced by Governor Hardwick at the next meeting of the general assembly, will deliver an address entitled "The Responsibilities of a Taxpayer."

J. R. Patillo stated that a play house for children has been built for the exposition as part of the educational work which "own your home" campaign is furthering. It is designed to catch the eyes of the children and plant the seed for a desire to own their own homes when they grow into maturity.

BARBECUE GIVEN FOR EMPLOYEES OF JACOBS' STORES

Nearly 170 employees of Jacob's pharmacy were entertained at a barbecue given at the Burns club Wednesda, celebrating memorial day. This is an annual event which all employees of the company look forward to throughout the year.

The grounds of the club were prepared for the event, to accomodate the guests. While the barbecue was sizzling over the flames those present diverted themselves with games of various kinds.

It was evident that everyone was there for a good time, and from all appearances every employee of the company was making the most of the occasion.

After the barbecue and games all went to Grant Park where they witnessed a baseball game, which concluded the festivities.

While examining the gun, Mashburn fired it in some unexplained manner, the bullet penetraung his arm.

She was said to be a cousin of Read Admiral Fletcher.

BASEBALL TICKER IN POOL PARLOR BANNED BY COURT

Judge W. D. Ellis, of the Fulton superior court, Wednesday issued a temporary injunction restraining R. L. York, proprietor of the Rex billiard room, from operating a baseball ticker in his place of business.

The injunction was issued at the request of the Georgia Billiard association, which claims the operation of the ticker is a violation of an agreement of billiard hall operators to refrain from operating any gambling devices.

Judge Ellis fixed May 8 as the date for a hearing on the motion for a permanent order in the case. The members of the Georgia Billiard association were represented by John Y. Smith, attorney.

MONARCHICAL CONTROL OR FEDERATION THE QUERY

Fullerton Classifies Grousp Wanting Changes in Athletic Control and the Others

A. A. U. Takes Position That Present Control Is Best for Athletics—Others Favor Changes and State Reasons and Advantages.

BY HUGH FULLERTON.

Shall one body control all American athletics?

Or

Shall all sport controlling bodies form one federation, each vouching for and being responsible for each athlete representing it in competitive meets?

The Line-Up.

United States army.
United States navy.
Natioual Collegiate Athletic association.
Young Men's Christian association.
United States Lawn Tennis association.

WHAT A. A. U. COUNTS ON.

These are the principal elements in the movement to reform athletics in the United States. Each side has its allies and its supporters.

The A. A. U., which has been outgrown, counts upon its controlled votes to handle the situation. The opposing forces seem determined to go ahead and form the federation along their own lines, inviting and even urging the A. A. U. to come into it and aid in the general movement toward the federation, which was proposed originally by the secretary of the A. A. U. and their allies perpetuating the control of athletics, especially of Olympic affairs.

The A. A. U. is interested in competitive sports, the development of champions and the winning of meets, all of which are good, save that the A. A. U never has and does not now take the broad view of the necessity of physcial education.

The federation stands for the athletic development of the whole nation, with championships as the natural result and the proper stimulant.

It looks now if the entire matter will be fought out along these lines, and, regardless of what else may happen, the dominance of all athletics by the A. A. U. is doomed.

A. R. U. HOLDS SUPREME POWER.

The truth is that the A. A. U. has its supreme power during recent years only because there was no opposition to it, and nothing left for an athlete to do but to register with the A. A. U. or quit the sport.

The theory that government derives its power through consent of the governed hardly applies in this case, for a great majority of the athletes registered with the A. A. U. are among its most violent opponents.

The generaly public naturally will not understand what the relations of the various bodies engaged in this controversy are.

It is rather complicated in spots. The attitude of the A. A. U. is simple enough. It presumes to control all, and to possess sanctioning power over all competitive events. Each athlete desiring to enter into competition is required to register with the A. A. U. Therefore, having compelled all these to register, it argues that it derives voting power by "controlling" them.

The Army is in a peculiar position. It has put its athletics upon a purely amateur basis. But it is required by the A. A. U. to register its athletes with the A. A. U., and denied the right to enter meets unless they are so registered. The Army cannot naturally surrender its control over its soldiers to any outside influence.

A FUNNY THING.

To me, one of the funniest things (or it would have been funny if it had not been so serious) was the resolution of the A. A. U. passed during 1918. I haven't the text of the resolution, but in effect it notified the United States that on account of extraordinary conditions, the Army and Navy would be permitted to hold meets without consulting the A. A. U., but inferred that after the war was over, the A. A. U. would hold the United States strictly responsible.

As a matter of fact, the Army and Navy never were notified of this thing, although it was produced afterward.

The relations of the Navy toward the A. A. U. are about the same as those of the Army, only worse.

The A. A. U. blames the Y. M. C. A. for stirring up the rebellion now in progress. This, however, seems far fetched, for the Y has steadily refused to assume any control over any athletics other than its own 50,000 active athletes.

It has gone further in permitting any local Y to affiliate with the A. A. U. if it saw fit. This, of course, further complicates the situation, since a large number of Y locals are also A. A. U. bodies.

The Knights of Columbus are not yet actively entangled in the matter. Their growth in athletics has come rapidly. In fact, it is only during and since the war that the K. of C. saw the importance of athletics. Its growth has been one of the marvels of the athletic world, and it is in a nice position, since it has not had time to form any entangling alliances. It is inconceivable that the K. of C., when it gets its growth, will permit any outside organization to rule its affairs.

LAWN TENNIS ASSOCIATION HAMSTRUNG.

The Lawn Tennis association is hamstrung, as far as Olympic events are concerned, by its affiliation with the European tennis associations, which have certain rules that compel them to break with one or the other.

The Cyclists, a powerful organization, cannot accept A. A. U. dominance, because they control both amateur and professional racing, and amateur racing must depend upon use of pro tracks to hold amateur meets.

The association football people are in the same fix, or near it, since they, too, have control of both pro and amateur and the A. A. U. insists upon controlling the amateur.

The situation is clearing somewhat now, but it will require a great deal of thought to straighten out the entire amateur problem.

MERCER MAULS VANDY 16 TO 1

Macon, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—Tige Stone held Vanderbilt to two singles and a home run this afternoon before one of the biggest crowds ever assembled at Central City park, and Mercer came out victor by a score of 16 to 1.

It was Vandy's first appearance here in a two-game series and because of the road trip the visitors did not make the showing that was expected of them. Embry was forced to retire from the game at the end of the third inning, Mercer men driving his deliveries to all corners of the lot. But Embry probably will go into the box tomorrow against Mercer's southpaw, Allie Thompson, in which game Vanderbilt hopes to tie the series.

Incidentally, today's game was the first errorless contest that Mercer has staged this season. A shift in players, most important of which was the recruiting of Prentiss from the reserves, worked to advantage to Josh Cody's squad. The Mercer infield played snappy ball throughout and there wasn't a bobble.

On the other hand the Vanderbilt fielders were decidedly off color at times, which, of course, may have bee.. due to their road trip.

Brown's Homer.

The only feature from the Vandy standpoint was Brown's home run. The only chance that the visitors had to score. Tige Stone pitched a great game all the way through, striking out eleven men, and at no time getting in a hole.

The first three Vanderbilt men to face Stone went out. Leuten and Reese striking out and Brown going out on an easy grounder.

In Mercer's half of the opening inning Hammock opened with a double to the left field fence, and from then on the swat fest was in order, five runs being tallied in the first inning and as many hits and three bobbles on the part of Vandy men.

Walker, who relieved Embry, settled down and really did some good pitching, striking out six men, although he walked a couple and also is credited with a balk.

WAYCROSS WINS OPENING GAME

Waycross, Ga., April 26.—Special.) The baseball season was formally opened in Waycross yesterday afternoon, when the local aggregation of ball-tossers administered a severe drubbing to the Douglas A. and M. college, 16 to 1. The farmer lads were completely outclassed in every phase of the game, and the locals scored at will. A total of 23 hits was gathered off the delivery of McRae and Clarke, visiting pitchers, while Barrentine, on the mound for the locals, was master of the situation at all times, allowing only one scratch hit.

The world's greatest hippodromers, Stanislaus Zbyszko and Strangler Lewis pulled and hauled their little act in Kansas City, Lewis getting the first and thrid falls and retaining the championship. Wild cheers from the sure thingers who were on the inside.

Will Benny Leonard and Lew Tendler fight for the lightweight title this summer? Those who follow the sport's game closely say that there is better than a possibility of this scrap taking place. What about that $5,000 that Lew is holding that belongs to Ben and the remarks by Ben's manager that he would never consent to a match between the two? Maybe Ben is going to do all the fighting and for this reason he might have some little say in this little thing.

John Wilson has at last agreed to meet any legitimate middle weight contender in the world but he wants to pick the place and time. Chances are that John would pick the 29th of February next year, and for this reason no place would be necessary.

That Guthrie tour that started at Ponce park Tuesday when six Cracker pitchers and a catcher started—may start a storm that will blow a few hats off. Whose hat it will be is dangerous to state—but some hats will soon be flying.

Incomplete Rhymes

A dashing young pitcher named Smith
Had an excellent arm to throw with,
When he lost his ninth game,
He swore 'twas a shame,

A fighter stopped three lusty swings,
And as his few brains put on their wings,
He let out a howl
And asked for a towel,

"Lefty" James in his initial start for the Crackers after his being purchased from New Orleans shows that he has pitching ability. There is a chance that his shakey start was on account of the large crowd at the Memorial day game, because it is a well known fact that large crowds are unusual to Pelicans.

After having two series swept clean with their quivering carcasses there is a mighty fine chance that the Crackers are due for a reversal of form in their opening contest with the Pellicans this afternoon. Dewey Marshall, who has had a few days' rest should be able to have those birds eating out of his ample paw.

President Spiller, who is just as anxious for a winning ball club as the most rabid fan in Atlanta, because he is in this category, is going to have a winner if it takes every sheckle in the sox. Atlanta fans can depend on this. Spiller is a new comer in the baseball firmament but he is going to make things hum in this Southern loop before he is through.

The race meet held at Lullwater Farms yesterday afternoon should show that there is interest in the harness racing game in Atlanta and Georgia. A word to the wise should, under these conditions, prove an elegant sufficiency.

When is Atlanta going to have a battle of the century. Fistically speaking. There is interest here to warrant the bringing in of some real headliners, so that the semi-finalists can get back into their proper rut. Let's go—What's become of that Pal Moore—Tim O'Dowd fight.

SOME NEWS BITS

BY UNITED NEWS

The upward and onward rush of the Giants and Yanks, leading both leagues, was checked by the Philadelphia clubs Wednesday, the Giants losing 6 to 4 in a slugging match in Philadelphia and the Yanks dropping a tough game in the ninth inning at the Polo Grounds, 4 to 2.

Every other hit was a double or a homer in the Giants-Phillies game and swatting honors were about even, the Giants having 11 hits and the Phils a dozen.

Sam Jones, pitching for the Yanks, had a 2 to 1 lead going into the ninth. He had allowed only four hits until that time and the game seemed safe enough when the Athletics stung him for three runs on as many hits. Rommell held the Yankee sluggers to six hits.

The White Sox beat the Indians, 6 to 3, in Cleveland. Ragged fielding, including four errors, by the Indians, assisted the Chicago team.

Four pitchers could not stop the hammering of the Senators in Washington and the Red Sox lost, 15 to 6. The Senators punished Pennock, Karr, Dodge and Fullerton for 19 smashes.

The Browns were the losers by the shutout score of 2 to 0 in the game with the Tigers in St. Louis. Ken Williams ruptured his consecutive hit record in the game and also failed to get a home run after making six in four games. Williams got a pair of hits, however, for a day's mark of .500.

Dazzy Vance, the Dodgers' recruit pitcher, beat the Braves in Boston, with plenty of slugging to assist him. Score 10 to 1. The Cubs, playing beyond the form earlier accredited to them, won another game, taking a victory over the Pirates in Chicago by sending in a run in their half of the ninth. Score 4 to 3. The Reds won their second game in a dozen starts, from the Cardinals, in Cincinnati, 3 to 0. Eppa Rixey gave the Cards but three hits.

ST. LOUIS WINS ENGLISH RACE

London, April 26.—Lord Queenborough's dark colt, St. Louis, running for the first time in an important race, captured the 2,000 guineas stake at 6 to 1, Wednesday, with the American jockey, Archibald, in the saddle. Pondoland, owned by Solly Joel, the well-known sportsman, was second at 5 to 1, and Lord Roolavington's Captain Tuttle was third at 4 to 1.

King George's Weathervane, running under the colors of Lord Marcus Beresford in order to give those who had bet on the horse a chance for their money, instead of being scratched because of the king's mourning, faltered at the quarter and died out, finishing far back in the field of 22.

The victory of St. Louis was a financial coup for those attached to Lord Queenborough's stable, for they had backed the horse with all the funds they could muster.

Viscount Lascelles and Princess Mary, not participating in the king's strict mourning for his cousin, Lord Mountbatten, were witnesses to the miserable showing of the king's entry. There is apparently very little chance of the royal stables making a good appearance in this year's derby, and Trainer Marsh, who sent Weathervane to the post with high hopes, was quite discouraged.

Re-echo, a derby prospect, from the same stable as St. Louis, is reported to be a better horse even than the winner of the 2,000 guineas, and therefore is likely to be a favorite in the greatest of all races.

Another American jockey, O'Neill, was aboard the second horse.

WILLIAMS, NEW HOME RUN KING

St. Louis, Mo., April 26.—With six home runs made in four days, Kenneth Williams, leftfielder of the St. Louis Amercans, today leads the major leagues in the home-run column, and with Babe Ruth, the "home-run king," on the suspension list until May 20, the St. Louis slugger has a chance to keep his lead for some time, at least.

Williams, with 24 circuit drives to his credit last year, tied Meusel, of New York, for second place in the home-run column of the American league. In addition to the four-base hits, Williams hammered out seven triples and 31 doubles. His average for the season was .347.

George Sisler, the local first baseman, has become Williams' trotting mate in making the race around the bases. Four times has Sisler crossed the plate ahead of Williams, after the latter had dropepd the ball in the spectators' stands or driven it into the street.

When Willlams started his home-run hititng streak last Saturday, he drove Sisler home three times on his four-ply hits. Because of a change in the line-up in Monday's games, Severeid preceded Willlams in crossing the plate on a home run.

In making six home runs in four days, Williams has a chance to equal Ruth's record last year, when he scored seven in five days.

Matinee Race Meet a Success; Lullwater Visited by Great Crowd

Atlanta Child's Home Is Benefited by Race Meet. Many Fine Horses Entered in Events.

BY MIKE THOMAS.

The matinee race meet arranged by the sponsors of the Atlanta Child's Home and several Georgia horsemen including Walter Candler, of Atlanta, that was raced yesterday afternoon was a huge success. One of the most colorful crowds that it has ever been the pleasure of this correspondent to see attended the meet and interest was at a high pitch in every heat of every race. Interest could not have been more intense had there been thousands of dollars wagered on each race, which speaks well for the racing and the closeness of each contest.

The child's home, the local charity benefiting by the meet, had a very interesting group of children at the meet, and something of the work that the home does was shown during the afternoon.

The success of this initial meet should arouse sufficient interest among the local harness race fans for a repetition of this sort of exhibition in the near future. Since this is one of the few opportunities for local followers of the harness game to follow their favorites, since the local grand circuit events that have been a sort of a fixture in these parts in the fall, have been cancelled for this season, these events would arouse more than the usual amount of interest.

The events on the program were run off on time and the results of the heats in the different events follows:

Class "B" (2 in 3).

Princess Peter bl. m., (McCullough), 1—1; Forsythia br. m., (Byfield), 5—4; Verona Frisco (Candler), 3—3; Lady Handspring (McCord), 2—2; George Styles, 4—6. Time, 2:38—2:40 3-4.

Class A. Trot.

The class "A" trot was the feature event of the afternoon program and the track record was given a brush in both heats. Sarah Kelly, who will be remembered by harness fans for her past performances here, was the winner in straight heats and slightly outclassed the field, leading practically all the way from the start of the race and gradually pulling away.

Mattie Morris, 2—3; Sarah Kelly (McTyer), 1—1; Cherry Abbe, 5—4; Norma the Great, 3—2; Cherry Gentry, 6—6. Time, 2:17 3-4—2:17.

Junior Pace.

Paul Abbe (Coggins), 2—3; Princess Belle (McCord), 1—3; Lula Forbes (Candler), 3—2. Time, 2:44 1-4—2:49.

Several of the horses appeared to be slightly out of shape, but this is to be expected at this time of year, but there was nothing in the program that could have hurt any one of the entries, and as a conditioning affair it was excellent.

COMMERCIAL LOSES TO PARK STREET NINE

The Park Street Methodist nine defeated Commercial High yesterday afternoon at Grant park by the score of 10 to 5. The game was one-sided all the way, the Commercial batters failing to connect with Florrid or Speer very successfully.

Garnett and White led the Park street team with the willow, both getting four hits out of four times at bat. Williams pitched well for the losers.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Park Street ..031 320 001—10 22 0

Batteries—Florrid, Speer and Maddox; Doss, Williams and Saul.

SPORTS THROUGH EDGREN'S EYES

Johnny Dundee may go to London next month to tackle Eugene Criqui, featherweight champion of Europe. Dundee is holding out for a $25,000 guarantee, having been offered $17,500 by English promoters.

Dundee can give anyone a fight. But he'll find no easy mark in Criqui. The French champion is a fighting man from the heels up. He has a steel jaw. Literal fact. In the war, where he served through several years of fighting and won three decorations after being wounded three or four times, Criqui had part of his jaw carried away by a bullet. The surgeons put in a steel plate, and when Criqui began boxing again after the war he found that the heaviest punch didn't even shake him.

Leo Flynn, manager of fighters and former matchmaker for Madison Square Garden, runs his enterprise on strictly business lines and has all the old-time managers reeling in circles when they think of what they have missed. Flynn has a "stable" of at least 20 boxers, and his income rivals Rockefeller's. He has a Broadway office, where he sits telephoning and wiring and dictating letters. He seldom arranges a match in person. That takes too much time. He keeps a card index of the performances of every boxer from California to Maine and other managers don't often fool him about the ability of their men. His secretary reads and clips the sporting notes about boxers. And when they aren't working his fighters run errands, answer telephone calls and keep annoying people away from the boss.

Imagine scene in Flynn's suite of offices. Line of waiting promoters outside, coming middleweight champ guarding the door to Flynn's sanctum. Promoter approaches timidly and is met by boxing gent on the door.

Promoter: "I'd like to see Mr. Flynn, please."

Door Guy: "Wattinellfor?"

Promoter: "I want to offer him $15,000 to let Bony Goofus meet Mickey McGoo in a four-round exhibitional, Choosday night."

Door Guy: "G'wan. Beat it, ya poor fish! There's a gent in there now beggin' Leo to accept $50,000 for that scrap."

Flynn' Voice, Inside: "G'wan! I said $42,350, with trainin' expenses an' a t'ousand dollar bonus for signin' or ab-so-loot-ly nothin' doin'. Sign on the dotted line or beat it. I got no time to argue."

Jack Dempsey may pretend that he's going to England to box exhibitions with Beckett, Wells and a few other champs and ex-champs across the sea, but this is the low down. Jack is going to hunt for some quiet spot where he can learn the fine points of golf. Whenever he appears on a golf course in this country he is followed by such a crowd that he can't put his mind on the game, and Dempsey's chief ambition, aside from holding the old title, is to knock a golf ball farther than anyone else can.

Jack can't see why a world's champion fighter shouldn't be able to paste a little rubber pill at least half a mile. His efforts, to date, merely result in giving the ball an awful gruelling. He has a notion of a championship match with Babe Ruth, when he comes back to America. Ruth is another champion whose personal inclinations lead to golf, and it looks as if Babe would have plenty of time for practice this spring.

BRUINS SWEEP CRACKER SERIES TAKING FINAL 5 TO 2

James Gets Shaky Start, Bears Scoring Four Runs In First Three Innings

Crackers Fight Hard and Make Four Hits Count for Two Runs—Extra Base Clouts Spell Ruin for the Cracker Clan.

BY CLIFF WHEATLEY.

The Crackers, accustomed to batting in sufficient runs to win any ball game, only to see their hurling selections toss away whatever advantage that comes with good batting, were unable to take advantage of Pitcher Schenburg's wildness in the final game of the series yesterday at Ponce de Leon, and an estimated crowd of 7,500 cash customers watched the homelings drop their seventh straight battle, the Mobile Bruins bringing their stay to an end by making a clean sweep of the series. The figures were 5 to 2.

His stock of right-handers completely exhausted in the effort to stem the tide, Captain Ellam sent "Lefty" James, obtained from New Orleans, into the pit, and James worked in brilliant fashion after the third inning. His shaky start, however, enabled the Bears to drive over four runs in the first three frames, and Schenburg clung tenaciously to his lead.

The use of James yesterday leaves the Cracker hurling in better shape than has been the case since the start of the campaign, and we look for a break in the long string of humiliations when Dewey Marshall goes against the Pelicans this afternoon.

James and the visiting hurler had lots of wildness in their systems, but aside from this, both pitched excellent ball. The Crackers found Schenburg for but a quartet of blows, while the Bruins were held to five by the Atlanta moundsman—probably their smallest allotment of base hits this season.

Pitchers Improve.

Instead of tiring as the game wore on, both seemed to gain strength. James let up in the ninth and the Bruins immediately shot over their last tally, but for several innings he had them breaking their backs to connect with his offerings. Schenburg had his worst innings about the middle of the game, but finished nicely.

The fielding was brilliant, as it was throughout the series. The Bears completed a couple of double plays that killed promising Atlanta rallies. With the four twin-killings listed in Tuesday's struggle and two the day before, the series was filled with fast work in handling the pellet.

Rhino Williams, right fielding for the Bruins, was a target all afternoon for Atlanta marksmen, handling five of their drives with ease. Boll, at shortston, was another sensation for the visitors, while Niehoff continued his good work at second.

Arthur Ritter at the keystone made up for his recent unstable work by figuring in eight plays, and Fred Graff was kept fairly busy scooping up Bear clouts down the third base line.

James Is Wild.

James' wildness in the first was responsible for the Bears' initial tally. He walked Boll, and D. Williams followed with a sacrifice bunt to Graff's sector. On a passed ball Boll reached second and scored when Mulvey sent up a long fly to Mayer.

James was still unable to locate the platter in the second and passed Huhn for the starter. Niehoff hit to James and was tossed out at first, Huhn reaching second. On Graff's error of Mullen's grounder, Huhn pulled in at third and scored on Baker's sacrifice fly to Holden, who went nearly to the right field dump to pull down the clout.

James regained control in the third, but had little on the ball, and the Bruins converted three hits into a couple of runs. Boll singled to center and went to second on D. Williams' second sacrifice. He scored on Mulvey's triple to deep left center. Rhino Williams followed with a single to right and Mulvey scored. Cyrus Barger was put to warming up for James' relief, but "Lefty" settled and the next batters were retired.

Crackers Score One.

Four runs behind and apparently helpless before Schenburg's mastery, the Crackers cut down the lead by one run in their half of the third. Ellam walked and went to third when Schenburg's throw to catch the Atlanta captain at first went wide. Bill Rariden came to the rescue, driving a sacrifice fly to center, Ellam scoring after the catch.

A base on balls to Guyon in the fourth paved the way for the Crackers' second counter. Ritter went out to R. Williams on a savage drive to right. Guyon walked. Holden popped to Niehoff, but Bernsen broke his long run of hard luck with a double to right, and the Chief scored easily. Graff was an infield out.

A base on balls to Huhn, followed by Niehoff's double to the scoreboard, gave the Bruins their score in the ninth. This clout might have been another home run for Niehoff, had he touched first base. He lost some precious seconds going back to touch the sack when nearly to second. It seemed that the visitors were in for another batch of runs, but Mullen, Baker and Schenburg were retired.

Bernsen and Boll were the leading hit-getters of the day.

FULTON HIGH WINS FROM A. B. C. NINE

The Fulton High school nine defeated the Atlanta Business college yesterday afternoon on the former's diamond at Brisbine park by the score of 13 to 5. The game was very interesting until the seventh, the score being 3 to 2 in favor of the A. B. C., but in the seventh inning the Fulton bats became active and eleven runs was the result.

Snipes pitched a fine game for the winners, keeping the six hits made by the visitors well scattered. His control was good, only one man reaching first on balls. Wimberly at short and Haney at first led in hitting, each getting a home run and two singles. "Battle Ax" Walton played a good game for the losers. Batteries: A. B. C., Bell and Walton; Fulton, Snipes and Moore.

New York Elated Over Pennant Race

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Philadelphians Thankful for Favors

New York, April 26.—This town is filled with a mild elation over the early deportment of the Giants and Yanks, who have roughly elbowed their way to the top of both stacks and are now taking playful kicks at the climbers attemping to come up from under. But New York is a championship town on both sides this year, and it will take another set of pennants to thrill the villagers as the early-rising, early-retiring citizenry of Philadelphia is being thrilled by the nigh-onto miraculous playing of the Phillies and the Athletics, who incidentally, took two slaps at the pride and joy of this metropolis on Wednesday.

Down in Philadelphia they are grateful for small favors. Last year they cheered every time Connie Mack's chappies held the other team to a five-run majority. The people got into that desperate, under-dog habit of mind, and seventh place was a goal beyond the ken of optimism

Even now first division is to a Philadelphia fan like heaven to a profiteer. They would rather believe there is no such place and go on fighting to finish at the top of second division. But anyway, they seem confident of breaking their long lease on the dungeon. The optimistic Athletics, idling about their hotel lobby or waiting their turns at the fish counter in the cafeteria, where they eke out their ration allowance of $2.50 a day, may be heard saying one unto another in this wise: "Well, Kid, it looks like seventh place this year—at least."

They Are Playing Real Ball.

Not the stumbling, name-calling, you-did-I-didn't, first-bounce-is-out kindergarten that played pork cohp to the Yankees' knife and fork just before the close of 1921. In Perkins, who, of course, was with the team last year, they now seem to recognize the best catcher in the American league, if not in both major leagues. Perkins was thus spotted by a great many critics a long time ago. In Rommel and Rollie Naylor they have two pitchers who can command at least an effort toward co-opertive fielding, and in addition they have Heinmach and Yarrison, rookies, but not exactly bushers, wherein they are an improvement on most of the men whom Connie Mack has been sending in to pitch these several seasons.

Mack Is Optimistic.

Pep Young, at second, seems to have cheered up the infield, and Mack is still trying to make a good shortstop out of Galloway. Mack thinks so much of his outfield that he was willing to let Whitey Witt go to the Yanks rather than pay him more money. But the figures on individual performances of the Athletics do not convey the impression of improvement as well as a glimpse of the team in action. Last year they tripped over their cleats, their bloomers came down, they got into Yang-Yang-Yang arguments with the fans and generally comported themselves in a manner to shame a tail-end club in the grammar school league. Of late they're playing like professionals.

John McGraw recently told the Philadelphia people that Kaiser Wilhelm's ball club was far better than the customers could realize from where they sat. And he called the roll of Art Fletcher, Goldie Rapp, Walter Henline, Le Bourveau, Lee Meadows, Hubbell and Jimmy Ring—not a championship organization at all, but a bunch of ball players.

The eastern clubs haven't met up with the westerners yet, but the Philadelphia teams have fought right back in most audacious manner against the Giants and Yanks, who are as good as any clubs they will have to fight out west. The Athletics will not win a majority of their games with the Yankees, Browns and Indians, perhaps, but they need not apologize too often to the White Sox, Red Sox, Senators, or Tigers. The Phils, for their part, will have to respect the Giants, Pirates and Cardinals, but they can try impudence and may get away with it, against the Braves, Reds, Cubs and Dodgers.

PEL HURLERS ARE IN FORM

New Orleans, La., April 26.—(Special.)—Pelican fans, at least some of those who were humming the "blues" a week ago because of the Pels not dashing off to a healthy lead in the pennant race, are now about convinced that it is only a question of time before Manager Dobbs will have his squad right close, if not in first, place.

Monday afternoon found the local club but a game and a half behind the Little Rock Travelers, leaders of the league. The margin is so slight that there is every reason to believe Dobbs may climb into first place by the end of the week.

What has been the weakest part of the Pel machine, lack of condition by the hurlers, seems to improve daily. Abe Bailey, though derricked from the mound and replaced by George McQuillan, Sunday, looks like one more start will put him at his best.

Pitching Value.

Just what value pitching is to a ball club was apparent for all of the fans in the recent Atlanta series. This time the Pels got the pitching and the Crackers didn't. The result was exactly like the games in which Dobbs' crowd tossed off to Mobile.

Though only Mobile, Atlanta and Birmingham have shown here to date, loyal Pelicans are quite confident that Dobbs has a club strong enough to make it quite uncomfortable for the 1922 pennant winners.

Carlton Molesworth, veteran Baron pilot, showed his mob to Pelican fans for the first time Monday. Molesworth's club—on paper—doesn't seem quite as formidable as that of a year ago. He has not been able as yet to replace "Pie" Traynor or "Dutch" Bernsen. Until Molesworth can replace them, he may find the going rough.

GORDON NINE WINS FROM G. M. C., 7 TO 3

Barnesville, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—Gordon won from Riverside in Griffin this afternoon by 7 to 3 in one of the most exciting games ever played in Griffin. Gordon scored three runs in the third and Riverside tied it up in the sixth on three errors and one hit. Gordon scored four in the eighth on some very pretty baseball. The outstanding feature of the game was the pitching of Alford, of Gordon, who struck out sixteen men and allowed only two hits, both singles, one coming in the sixth and the other in the ninth. Coming close to Alford for honors was Wade in center for Gordon who hit a home run with two on and fielded sensationally. Alford struck out every man on Riverside team at least one and fanned seven in succession.

BULLDOGS WIN FROM BENNING

Driving Park, Columbus, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—Georgia's bats worked like greased lightning against the offerings of "Dirty" Jones, the elongated pitching ace of the United States Infantry school in the second game of the series here this afternoon, and the collegians copped by the score of 10 to 3.

Dekle, who was the first mound choice of Coach White for the Red and Black, was unable to hold the soldiers and was relieved in the beginning of the sixth by Pantone, premier Red and Black pitcher, who held the soldiers in his hand while his teammates pounded Jones.

Scores Come in Pairs.

In the opening game the Bulldogs put over two and the Infantry did the same. In the second the soldiers took the lead by securing one tally. Georgia retaliated in the fourth, tying the score again in the seventh. Tht Bulldogs went into the lead proper by securing four tallies and then again in the ninth put one across.

Pantone's great drop and fast ball stood him in good stead, while the Infantry batters whiffed, one of the most unusual happenings.

Boney, playing at the initial sack, who did not show up so well in yesterday's battle, slapped out three safeties out of four trips to the platter, one of which was for three bags, and also brought in three of Georgia's ten runs.

UNIVERSITY SCHOOL LOSES TO LAGRANGE

LaGrange, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—In a game featured by the pitching of Jarrell, LaGrange High school defeated University School for Boys, of Atlanta, here today by the score of 9 to 3. Jarrell pitching for LaGrange struck out fifteen men, allowing one hit until the sixth inning, when he eased up and allowed University seven hits the balance of the game. Coach Boone used three pitchers in an effort to stop the heavy-hitting LaGrange team and finally B. Boswell who went in the sixth held them scoreless for the rest of the game. T. Boswell, for University, led in hitting for his team, getting three hits out of four times up. By winning today the LaGrange High school made it the sixth straight game won in the past two weeks.

JIMMIE WILLIAMS DIES FROM INJURIES

Savannah, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—Jimmie Williams, a well-known amateur motorcyclist, recently adopting the racing automobile, died tonight from injuries received this afternon when in Memorial day races on the Tri-State exposition grounds dirt track, the Essex car he was driving turned over twice with him, breaking his back.

Golden Tornado Too Strong; Swamp Midshipmen 13 to 1

Annapolis, Md., April 26.—(Special.)—The Naval baseball team on Saturday piled up the biggest score in years against Delaware college, 13 to 4. Today they suffered their most crushing defeat, likewise in many years. Georgia Tech turned the trick by the figures of 13 to 1.

The Golden Tornado furnished the snappiest exhibition of fielding seen on a local diamond this season, except for a wild heave by Collins which, however, was not costly. The work was faultless. The Middies, on the other hand, played loosely in two or three innings, and the southerners, making the best of the miscues, and with most of their bingles of the timely order, piled up the score.

Big "Ike" Neimeier twirled steadily for the first four innings but the miscues of his teammates kept him in hot water all the time afer that. Collins, who opposed him on the slab, was touched for 8 hits. All but two, however, were scattered and although he issued 7 free passes, the giltedged support given was a big factor, as the sailor lads were at least able to hit the pill. The Maddies sustained a severe setback as a result of the game, as Hederman, shortstop, suffered a broken nose when a ball grazed off his bat in the sixth inning and he may not be able to play again this season.

Tech Scores Three.

The southerners put the game on ice in the first inning when they gathered three runs, on as many errors, two fielder's choices, a base on balls, and an out at first. The Middies registered their lone tally in the same frame when Harris walked and Neimeier hit for three bases. Three miscues by the sailors gave Tech another tally in the fourth. In the fifth the visitors bunched three hits and by clever haserunning, got two more. They counted four times in the sixth by again bunching three bingles and with the aid of a free pass and an error. In the seventh Neimeier walked two and with two singles the visitors had a brace of runs that brought their count to 12. The final run came in the eighth, when Griffin drove a long one to right garden for three sacks and Baum followed with a clean single.

The Georgians made a shift in their lineup today, compared to that of other contests played on the northern trip and it seemed to keep the team pepped up all the while. "Red" Barron, famous halfback, was moved from center garden to first base, in place of Edwards and O'Leary took Barron's position. Barron held down the sack in splendid style, accepting 14 chances. He also led with the willow with three singles in five chances.

A fielding feature of the game was a fast double play between Barchet, Hederman and Alexander, of Navy.

When Sam Houston Saved Texas

WHEN Sam Houston saved Texas for the Americans in that historic fight on the banks of the San Jacinto, his valor was rewarded with the presidency of the new "Texas Republic."

A log cabin served as his presidential "mansion" and the "capital" was little more than a collection of tents and huts on the prairie's edge.

Today that sturdy settlement of frontiersmen has become a city whose wealth and beauty far exceed Sam Houston's boldest dreams.

Stop on your way to California and see the modern Houston—its towering buildings, industries, commerce, delightful residences and palatial hotels. Include the side trip to Galveston, the "Atlantic City of the Southwest."

TRAIL'S END

BY G. W. ODGEN

There was a choking scream, and a woman's cry. "Look out! Look out!" Peden, on the fringe of a crowd of shrinking, great-eyed women, fired as Morgan turned. Morgan blessed the poor creature who was woman enough in her debauched heart to cry out that warning, as the breath of Peden's bullet brushed his face. Morgan could not defend himself against this assault, for the coward stood with one shoulder still in the huddling knot of women, and fired again. Morgan dropped to the floor, prone on his face. Peden came one cautious step from his shelter, leaning far over to see, a smile of triumph baring his gleaming teeth; another step, while the crowd broke the stifling quiet with shifted feet. Morgan, quick as a serpent strikes, raised to his elbow and fired. Morgan had one clear look at Peden's face as he threw his arms high and fell. Surprise, which death, swift in its coming, had not yet overtaken, bulged out of his eyes. Surprise; no other emotion expressed in that look upon this life. And Peden lay dead upon his own floor.

Rhetta Thayer, in the door of the Headlight office, stood in the pain of one crucified while the shots sounded in Peden's hall. Then somebody rushed by with the news. Dead—Peden and the gun-slingers he had brought there to kill Morgan; any number of others who had mixed in the fight; Morgan himself—all dead, the floor covered with the dead. That was the terrible word Rhetta put out her hands as one blind, held to the door frame a moment while the blood seemed to drain out of her heart.

Impelled by a desire that was commanding as it was terrifying, Rhetta joined the moving tide that set toward Peden's door. She began to run, her feet numb, her body numb. The lights were bright in Peden's hall, a great crowd leaned and strained and pushed around its door. There were some who asked her kindly to go away, others who appealed earnestly against her looking into the place, as Rhetta pushed her way, panting like an exhausted swimmer, through the crowd. She looked in through the open door.

Morgan was standing like a soldier a little way inside the door, his rifle ready, denying by the very sternness of his pose the passage of any foot across that threshold of tragedy. Beyond him lay the bodies of the two infamous guards who had been posted at the door to take his life; along the glistening bar, near its farther end, Peden stretched with face to the floor. Rhetta looked for one terrifying moment on that scene. And in that moment Morgan saw her face; the horror, the revulsion, the sickness of her shocked soul. A moment, a glance, and she was gone.

Long after that fearful waste of battle had been cleared from Peden's floor and the lights of that hall were put out; long after the most wakeful householder of Ascalon had sought his bed, Morgan walked in the moonlight, keeping vigil with his soul. The curse of blood had descended upon him, and she whose name he could speak only in his heart, had come to look upon his infamy and flee before his face. From that hour she would abhor him, and shrink from his polluted hand. Very well; he would clean up the town for her as she had looked to him to do, sweep it clear of the last iniquitous gun-slinger, the last slinking gambler, the last drab. Then he would go his way, leaving his new hopes behind him with his old.

Although it was a melancholy resolution, it brought him the quiet that a perturbed mind often enjoys after the formation of a definite plan, no matter for its desperation. Morgan went to the hotel, where Tom Conboy was smoking his cob pipe in a chair tilted back against a post of his portico.

Conboy got up, gaping in amazement. Morgan had stepped into the light that fell through the open door. The metal shield that proclaimed his office was cupped as if it had been held edgewise on an anvil and struck with a hammer. Morgan hastily detached the badge and put it in his pocket, plainly displeased by the discovery Conboy had made.

"Bullet hit it, square in the center!" Conboy said. "It was square over your heart!"

"Keep it under your hat!" Morgan warned, speaking crossly, glowering darkly on Conboy as he passed.

CHAPTER IX.

Ascalon Whines.

"I feel like I share his guilt," said Rhetta, voice sad as if she had suffered an irreparable loss.

"He's not guilty," said Violet Stilwell stoutly.

Rhetta had fled from Ascalon that morning following the terrible night of Morgan's sanguinary baptism. Racked by an agony of mingled remorse for her part in this tragedy and the loss of some valued thing which she would not bring her heart to acknowledge, only moan over and weep, and bend her head to her pillow through that fevered night, she had taken horse at sunrise and ridden to Stilwell's ranch, for the comfort of Violet, whose sympathy was like balm to a bruise.

"I begged him to give up the office and let things go," said Rhetta, pleading to mitigate her own blame.

"You'd have despised him for it if he had," said Violet.

"But he wouldn't do it, and now this has happened, and he's a mankiller like the rest of them. Oh, it's terrible to think about!"

"Not like the rest of them," Violet corrected, in her firm, gentle way. "He had to stand up like a man for what he was sworn to do, or run like a dog."

"They say, they were talking all over town that night—last night—and saying the same thing this morning, that he didn't give them a show, that he just turned his rifle on them and killed them before he knew whether they were going to shoot or not!"

"Well, they lie," said Violet, with the calmness of conviction.

"I suppose he had a right to do what he did, but he doesn't seem like the same man to me now. I feel like I'd lost something—some friendship that I valued, I mean, Violet—you know what I mean."

"I know as well as anything," said Violet, smiling to herself, head turned away.

"I never want to see him again, I'll always think of him standing there with that terrible gun in his hands, those dead men around him on the floor!"

"You may have to go to him on your knees yet, and I hope to God you will, Rhetta Thayer!" Violet said.

"If you'd seen somebody—somebody that you—that was—if you'd seen him like I saw him, you wouldn't blame me so," Rhetta defended, beginning again to cry, and bend her head upin her hands and moan.

Violet was moved out of her harshness at once. She put her arm around the weeping girl, whose sorrow was too genuine to admit a doubt of its great depth, and consoled her with soft words.

A week had passed and the last gambler, painted woman and saloonist had gone. The town was dead.

Only the day before, Judge Thayer had told Morgan that Rhetta was at Stilwell's ranch, whither she had gone to compose herself after the strain of so much turmoil. Morgan could only feel that she had gone there to avoid him, shrinking from the sight of his face.

There was not much warmth in Morgan's reception by the business men of Ascalon around the square that morning. Earnest as their solicitations had been for him to assume the office of marshal, voluble as had been their protestations that they would accept the result without a whimper, there were only a few who stood by their pledges like men. These were the merchants of solider character, whose dealings were with the cattlemen and homesteaders. While these few commended Morgan's stringent application of the letter and spirit of the state and town laws, their encouragement was only a flickering candle in the general gloom of the place.

This morning when Judge Thayer encountered Morgan on the street, he invited the city marshal to accompany him to his office. News that would tickle his ears, he said; big news. The biggest news was that the railroad company was going to establish a division point there at once. This decision had come as a result of the town waking up and shedding its leprous skin. They felt that it would be a safe place for their employees to live now. But there was more news. The eastern immigration agents of the railroad were spreading the news of Ascalon's pacification with gratifying result. Already parties of Illinois and Indiana farmers, who had been looking to that country for a good while, were preparing to come out and scout for locations.

It was the marvel and regret of people who made their adventures vicariously, and live the thrill of them by reading the newspapers, that Ascalon had come to a so sudden and unmistakable end of its romance. For a little while there was hope that it might rise against this Cromwell who had reached out a long arm and silenced it; for a few days there was satisfaction in reading of this man's exploits in this wickedest of all wicked towns, for newspapers sent men to study him, and interview him, and write of his conquest of Ascalon on the very battle ground.

Little enough they got out of Morgan, who met them kindly and talked of the agricultural future of the country lying almost unpeopled beyond the notorious little city's door. Such as they learned of his methods of taming a lawless community they got from looser tongues than the city's marshal's.

Even from Chicago and St. Louis these explorers among the fallen temples of adventure came, some of them veterans who had talked with Jesse James in his day but recently come to a close. They waited around a few days for a shot that would remove this picturesque crusader, not believing, any more than the rest of the world, including Ascalon itself, believed that this state of quiescence could prevail without end.

While they waited, sending off long stories by telegraph to their papers every night, they saw the exodus of the prescribed begin, increase and end. The night-flitting women went first, urged away by the necessities of the flaccid fish which lived upon their shame. The gamblers and gamekeepers followed close behind.

A little while the small saloonkeepers who had nosed the floor and licked up the crumbs which fell from Peden's bar hung around, hoping that it was a flurry that would soon subside. They had big eyes for future prosperity, the overlord being now out of the way, and talked excitedly among themselves, even approached Morgan through an emissary with proposals of a handsome subsidy.

But when they saw a Kansas City gambler come and strip Peden's hall of its long bar and furnishings, of its faro tables and doctored roulette wheels, load them on a car and ship them to his less notorious but safer town, they knew it was the end. Ascalon had fallen with its most notable man, never to rise up again.

Not that Ascalon was as dead as it appeared on the surface, or the gamblers would make it out to be. True, the undertaker's business had gone, and he with it; Druggist Gray's trade in the bromides and restoratives in demand after debauches, and repairs for bunged heads after the nightly carousels, had fallen away to nothing, the Elkhorn hotel and the Santa Fe cafe were feeding few, and the dealers in vanities and fancies, punctured hosiery, lacy waists, must pack up and follow those upon whom they had prospered.

But there was as much business as before in lumber and hardware, implements, groceries, and supplies for the cattle ranches and the many settlers who were arriving without solicitation or proclamation and establishing themselves to build success upon the ruins of failure left by those who had gone before.

It was only the absence of the wastrels and those who preyed upon them, and the quiet of nights after raucus revelry, that made the place seem dead. Ascalon was as much alive as any town of its kind that had no more justification for being in the beginning. It had more houses than it could use now, since so many of its population had gone; empty stores were numerous around the square, and more would be seen very soon. The fair was over, the holiday crowd was gone. That was all.

Rhetta Thayer came back the same evening the last correspondent faced away from Ascalon. Morgan saw her in the Headlight office, where she worked late that night to overtake her accumulated affairs, her pretty head bent over a litter of proofs. Her door stood open as he passed, but he hastened by softly, and did not return that way again.

These days Morgan avoided the Headlight office, for there was a sensitive spot in his heart that Rhetta's abhorrence of him hurt keenly. But more than that he had the thought of sparing her the embarrassment of a meeting, even of his shadow passing her door. Twice he saw her at a distance in the street, and once she stood waiting as if to speak to him. But the memory of her face at Peden's door that night was with him always; he could not believe she would seek a meeting out of a spontaneous and honest desire to see him. So he believed, and turned the other way.

Cattlemen from the range at hand, and several from Texas who had driven their herds to finish on the far-famed Kansas grass for the fall market, were loading great numbers of cattle to Ascalon every day. The drouth was driving them to this sacrifice. Lean as their cattle were, they would be leaner in a short time.

This activity brought scores of cowboys to town daily. Under the old order business would have been lively at night, when most of the herdsmen were at leisure. As it was, they trooped curiously around the square, some of them who had looked forward on the long drive to a hilarious blowout at the trail's end resentfully sarcastic, but the greater number humorously disposed to make the best of it.

Sober, these men of the range were very much like reservation Indians in town on a holiday. They walked slowly around and around the square looking at everything closely, saying little, to dispose themselves along the edge of the sidewalk after a while and smoke. There were no fights, nobody let off a gun. When Morgan passed them on his quiet rounds, they nudged each other, and looked after him with low comments, for his fame had gone far in a little while.

These men had no quarrel with Morgan, disappointed of their revelry, thirsty after their long waiting, sour as some of them were over finding this oasis of their desert dry. They only looked on him with silent respect. Nobody cared to provoke him; it was wise to give the road, when a fellow met that man. So they talked among themselves, somewhat disappointed to find that Morgan was not carrying his rifle about with him these peaceful days, unusual weapon for a gun-fighting man in that country.

Ascalon's temper was not improved by the close passing of rain, which had refreshed but a small strip of that almost limitless land. The sun came out as hot as before, the withering wind blew from the southwest that ceaseless wind, untempered by green of bough overhead or refreshing turf under foot. There was no justice in their hearts, and no mercy. Morgan himself did not escape this infection of ill humor that rose out of the hard-burned earth, streamed on the hot wind, struck into men's brains with the rays of the penetrating sun. Not conscious of it, certainly, any more than the rest of them in Ascalon were aware of their red-eyed resentment of every other man's foot upon the earth. Yet Morgan was drilled by the boring sun until his view upon life was aslant. Resentment, a stranger to him in his normal state, grew in him, hard as a disintegrated stone; scorn for the ingratitude of these people for whom he had imperiled his life rose in his eyes like a flame.

More than that, Morgan brooded a great deal on the defilement of blood he had suffered there, and the alienation, real or fancied, that it had brought of such friends as he valued in that town. By an avoidance now unmistakably mutual, Morgan and Rhetta Thayer had not met since the night of Peden's fall.

One thing only had kept Morgan in Ascalon. That was the threatened vengeance of Peden's friends. He was giving them time to come for their settlement; he felt that he could not afford to be placed in the light of one who had fled before a threat. But it seemed to him, after another week, that he had waited long enough. His intention was, as he rode away early one night, to return Stilwell's horse, come back to Ascalon next day resign his office and leave the country. Even as his thoughts were on Rhetta Thayer she came riding up the dim road. She was riding unattended where, ten days ago, she would not have ventured with a guard.

"Mr. Morgan!" she said, recognizing him with evident relief. Then quickly, "Who's looking after things in town tonight?"

"I left things to run themselves," he told her quietly.

"Well," she said after a little silence, "I don't suppose you're needed very much."

"That's what the business men are saying," he told her, sarcasm in his dry tone.

"I don't mean it that way," she hastened to amend. "You've done us a great service—we'll never be able to pay you—"

"There isn't any pay involved," he interposed, almost roughly. "There never will be any bill."

"It's such a lovely cool night I couldn't stay at home," she said, laboring to be natural and at ease. "Why haven't you been in?"

"I wanted to spare you what you can't see in the dark," he said.

"What I can't see in the dark?" she repeated, as if perplexed.

"My face."

"You shouldn't say that," she chided, but not with the hearty sincerity that a friend would like to hear. "Are you going back to town?"

"I'll ride with you," he granted.

Gay Costumes Make Audience Sea of Color

Claudio Muzio, in her crimson gown, when she appeared as the majestic Loreley in Catalani's opera, was only one resplendent feature of the second night of Atlanta's twelfth annual engagement of the Metropolitan Opera company. There was also the first hearing in the south of Benjamino Gigli, the most sensational of the new tenors in the Metropolitan forces, an opera performance that matched in fervor and artistic success the first two events of the week's repertoire, and an audience that grows in enthusiasm with what it feeds upon. For it is quite generally conceded that, for inspiration and general excellence this year's productions are far and away ahead of the generality of those for several years past.

In this third performance of the week, people had begun to feel more at home. They had discovered their friends in their season boxes or seats and knew just where to go to make their calls between acts, while out-of-town guests, too, were no longer strangers, and the audience between acts was as mobile as an afternoon tea.

Never has the costuming of the women in the audience been more resplendent, with metal cloth popular in all the richness of oriental color, or pale as moonlight, crystals and rhinestones heavily beaded on clinging crepes or these same heavy metal cloths, and in contrast the filmiest chiffons relying on their own color and the grace of their drapery to make the charm of the gown.

"On such a night" fans wave with all the languor of diplomacy or maybe sometimes even indifference, and everywhere, over the consciousness of lights and color and the animated murmur of voices, floats the fragrance of flowers.

The day had been a stirring one. The lack of a matinee left little freedom, for everybody took on extra obligations, and breakfasts and luncheons, teas and dinners with the barbecue at Druid Hills club as the apex of enjoyment, filled a busy calendar.

Afterwards with opera over, the day was yet young for a host of people, and the supper-dances at the Capital City club and the Georgian Terrace hotel assembled each a large company.

CONDUCTORS ARE GUESTS OF HONOR.

Gennaro Papi, conductor, was the center of an intimate company assembled by Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Elsas at their home in Druid Hills to meet him after opera, and this occasion was a happily informal one, with ideals and movements and personages, as well as artistic gossip, to form the leit motif for that rarest indulgence of people these days—real conversation. A delicious supper was an enjoyable feature of Mr. and Mrs. Elsas' hospitality.

Another conductor, Louis Hasselmans, of whose work Atlanta had the first experience in his interesting conductorship of "Carmen," was also honored with an informal get-together of artistic people to meet him, when Miss Nan Stephens was hostess in the afternoon at tea at her home in Druid Hills. Miss Florence Easton, prima donna of the Metropolitan, shared honors with Mr. Hasselmans, and in the receiving group also was Mrs. Hasselmans, better know in Atlanta by her maiden name, which is her stage name, Minnie Egener.

"Loreley," New to Atlanta, Proves Delightful Opera

Atlanta operagoers, transported on Monday night back to the days of feudalism and chivalry in Spain, and on Tuesday matinee living another Spanish romance, so human as to be possible of any period, journeyed still farther back in last night's production of Catalani's "Loreley," by the Metropolitan Opera company, to mediaeval times, which in turn delve as far in the past as the fables of mythology for their picturesque superstitions and heir romance.

The character of the music of the opera which was composed by Alfred Catalani in 1880, sounded to those operagoers who are in tune with modern music almost a antiquated as the period of the plot. This does not mean that the audience was not pleased. Certainly the music was of a type of which they could measure the full value without any great mental strain, and yet it must be admitted that it did not hold the inspiration to enjoyment which lay in Verdi's "Ernani" of the first night, written as the latter was a musical generation before It would be at bit cruel, however, to compare inspiration of any Italian composer of opera with the genius of Verdi in any of his periods.

The score is a sort of natural sequence of the suggestion which a composer, lacking in originality but skilled in workmanship, would unconsciously derive from conventions established by such a dominating influence as Verdi, and inevitably affected at the same time by the iconoclasm of Wagner.

As to the Verdi comparison, Catalani's music, while it is quite singable, proved not to have the abounding melody of the Verdi inspiration, although its arias and duets are in some instances very pleasing if not memorable. The Wagner resemblance is to the pretentious effects of Wagner's earlier period in which he had not yet broken away from the mere showiness which had its height of exploitation in the Meyerbeer operas.

Magnificent Cast.

The directorate of the Metropolitan Opera company had done its part fully to justify the revival of "Loreley," giving it a cast made up of headliners, even at the Metropolitan, while the scenic investiture measured up to the full possibilities of the fantastic element in the legendary phase of the story and there was at least one opportunity for one of those great ensemble scenes in which the company reached its own surpassing standards in stage setting, costuming and musical power; this the episode of the interrupted wedding.

It proved last night that those comparisons made by critics of the New York performance were well taken, which compared the interrupted wedding with the similar big scene in "Lohengrin;" the duet in the first act in which the hero tells of his love complications to his friend. Hermann, with Tannhauser's story of the Venusburg, and the funeral of the Anna of last night with Elizabeth in the Wagner music drama. There was the difference that Catalani has not provided a comparable basis of interesting music.

But such thoughts are after thoughts and had little place in the minds of the audience while the Metropolitan's magnificent performance provided such effective emphasis of the strongest possibilities in the opera that its weaknesses appeared negligible.

Foremost in the production of this effectiveness was Claudio Muzio, a magnificent looking mermaid with a completeness of vocal and artistic equipment to illuminate a somewhat thankless role to such extent as greatly to magnify its intrinsic value.

Gigli's First Appearance.

The voice of Benjamino Gigli, so long heralded as one of the greatest present-day finds of the Metropolitan company, was revealed as well worthy the popular anticipation of it.

Guiseppi Danise, in a sort of superfluous part as far as the exigencies of the plot would suggest, made the role one that his audience found anything but unnecessary to their enjoyment; while Martino was appropriately sonorous as Rudolfo, the Margrave and uncle of Anna.

Miss Delaunois, substituting in the Atlanta performance for Marie Sundecies, who had the part in New York of the abandoned bride, sang very charmingly on the occasion when she has a real chance to sing, and this happened to be one of the best features of the opera from the standpoint of muical worth.

This song of Anna's, which is light in character and tuneful, draws attention to the fact that possibly the other best thing in the opera also departs from the tragic tone which is dominant through the opera, namely the dance of the water nymphs, which is an incident of the last act.

The last act might indeed be pronounced the most beautiful since it held an opening chorus of peasants which is tuneful and was done in the best style of the Metropolitan chorus; the music of the funeral procession was rather imposing, and there was varied style of beauty in the dance of the water nymphs, the final love duet between "Walter" and "Loreley" and those orchestral passages which are the background for the lovers' final farewell.

That the audience was on tip-toe of expectation for the first appearance of Gigli had very atmospheric manifestation, and even though his first appearance, in which he tells the story of his love to his friend "Hermann" is a stupid scene, it was heard with the keen interest of curiosity.

Tenors with the Metropolitan must for a while be gauged by a very big precedent, but the opera lover who is philosophic will remember that even Caruso in his earlier days was no actor, and Gigli has without question one of those rare Italian treasures, a voice of golden tone and easy delivery. His voice has power without great volume and his mezzo voce is well taken.

The romantic fervor which is one of his best qualifications, his hearers were not kept long waiting for because a passionate scene with Loreley exploits his dramatic power before he tears himself away, leaving his deserted love in the first faint which marks an elaborate series of collapses by the ladies in the story, who are much loved, but invariably loved and loving unwisely.

So satisfying was the voice of Gigli in the Catalani music that one is obliged to look forward to even greater satisfaction when the new tenor has the deeper inspiration of his role of Alfredo in the abounding melody Verdi has given his hero in "Traviata," which will be sung Friday night.

Muzio Impressive.

That Atlanta and the whole patronage of the Metropolitan season in the south had not forgotten Claudio Muzio, although it has been several years since she sang here last, was soon demonstrated in the greeting extended her first appearance last night, and as singer and actress she made manifest the deepened powers of the real artist who grows invariably with the years; that is with the years of youth maturing. Her regal beauty enhanced her vocal effectiveness and if her charm was that of majesty rather than alluringness, rather was that, in part at least, the fault of the musical delineation of the mermaid.

Mr. Danise in thepart of Hermann had one more occasion to prove the vast effectiveness of his beautiful voice and the finish of his art in that he was so well able to make his every appearance a joy to his hearers, even though his role itself was so plainly unnecessary to the actual unfolding of the plot.

Mr. Martino, while he had little to do, did that little so well as to add distinctly to the complete beauty of the opera's performance.

Maronzoni, conducting, won enthusiastic tribute for the even excellence of the production as a whole.

LOUISE DOOLY.

Lullwater Driving Club Opens With Racing Program

The formal opening of the Lullwater Driving club Wednesday afternoon was the inspiration for many visitors and Atlantans attending the races where fifteen horses were entered in a program of events out on the race course which is a part of the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Candler on Lullwater road, and is Mr. Candler's hobby.

The opening of the course was made a benefit affair for the Atlanta Child's home, and the usual "concessions" on racing grounds, instead of being commercial enterprises, were conducted by the ladies of the Child's home board to raise funds for this, their pet charity.

The gay riding clothes of the jockies, white riding breeches with bright-colored satin coats, for once vied with the vivid hues of the sport clothes worn by the ladies who cheered their favorite mounts, and bunting and pennants waved, a band played, and all was merry as a May morning.

Mrs. Druc Robinson was general chairman in charge of the event for the Child's home.

Mrs. Walter Martin, Mrs. Henry Heinz and Mrs. Lynn Frederick Howard, in charge of the grandstand, acted as hostesses to the opera stars attending the meet.

Mrs. Herbert Porter, chairman, and Mrs. Lewis M. Cutter, vice chairman, assisted by a charming group of society belles, sold Eskimo pies. Balloons were sold under the leadership of Mrs. A. B. Niall.

Misses Anne and Dolly Hart, assisted by friends in French maid costumes, peddled homemade candies.

Mrs. Clyde K. Byrield has charge of the sale of chewing gum, and Mrs. Linton Hopkins conducted the sales of peanuts and popcorn. From a brightly decorated booth, Mrs. Ohlman sold soft drinks. Mrs. Frank Burr assisted by a group of Junior League girls in the costumes in which they ushered at the Atlanta theater at their "Follies," had charge of the programs.

Feast and Fun Are Combined In Big Event

The Druid Hills Golf club performed again its most picturesque of unusual functions Wednesday, when it was the colorful scene for another of the opera barbecues—those yearly festivities that so deftly blend splendor and simplicity, honor to distinguished guests and friendships cemented by informality.

More than 300 people were foregathered on the terrace and on the club house fringe of the golf course to add their lot to the general exuberance of the occasion.

OPERA STARS ARE PRESENT.

The opera stars, Grace Anthony, Lucrezia Bori, Ellen Dalossy, Raymonde Delaunois, Florence Easton, Amelita Galli-Curci, Alice Miriam, Claudia Muzio, Frances Peralta, Rosa Ponselle, Myrtle Schaaf, Marion Telva, Angelo Bada, Mario Chamlee, Beniamino Gigli, Orville Harrold, Giovanni Martinelli, Giordano Paltrinieri, Manuel Salazar, Louis D'Angelo, Giuseppe Danise, Giuseppe De Luca, Mario Laurenti, Vincenzo Reschiglian, Antonio Scotti, Paolo Ananian, Jose Mardones, Giovanni Martino, Leon Rothier, together with scores of men and women of Atlanta, and guests from every part of the south conspicuously identified with social life, made up the assemblage, thereby characterizing the barbecue with an individuality all its own.

DANCING ENJOYED IN BALLROOM

An orchestra played a program of music on the terrace from 12 to 1 o'clock. Dancing was enjoyed in the ballroom after the 'cue.

The smartest of sport costumes were worn by the lovely women present, and gave an effective point in the detail of this very auspicious event which is always enjoyed by the artists for the very fact that the occassion is most notable for its informal atmosphere.

PONSELLE SINGS "SUWANEE RIVER".

Miss Rosa Ponselle, always a favorite in Atlanta, sang "Way Down Upon the Suwanee River," introducing a strain of "Home, Sweet Home," which charmed and thrilled her hearers. Her costume was of white homespun, and her hat and cape were of white.

Miss Lucrezia Bori wore a costume of white serge, with touches of black and her hat was of white straw.

Antonio Scotti appeared nattily attired in a sage green golf suit, which was greatly admired. Mr. Scotti announced to his friends that he didn't play golf but he just wanted to give his tailor an order.

Dr. Thomas P. Hinman, president of the club, with his charming wife, Mrs. Hinman, together with other officers and directors and their wives formed the receiving party and included Mr. and Mrs. Lowry Arnold, Hunter Perry, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Heinz, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Parks, Mr. and Mrs. W. Beautiful Supper-Dance Held at Terrace After Performance

Many Metropolitan Stars Guests or Hosts at Affair

Pink roses and swansonia were the cut flowers used in an artistic decoration of the rose dining-room at the Georgia Terrace last night, when a supper-dance following upon the opera assembled there a gay company.

Palms massed effectively against the prevailing white of the lofty room were the basis of decoration, and detail was in wall baskets of the pink and white flowers, which were hung also against the pillars in the upper end of the apartment. A large orchestra provided music.

Many of the stars of the opera domiciled at the Terrace, whose parts are cast later in the week, or are over, were among those entertaining or being entertained, and it was to be observed that they did not all adhere to the regular supper menu, but ordered those dishes which may be called Bohemian, and which are supposed to be necessary to the artistic temperament or necessary to the creation of the temperamental illusion.

Alone to be observed among the ladies present was some of the most elaborate and effective costuming of the week.

Annual Spring Gaities Begin Today at University

Athens, Ga., April 26.—(Special.) Thursday marks the opening of spring festival week-end at the University of Georgia, assembling hundreds of the most beautiful girls of the south for the week-end gaities, which will include a series of three dances at the university, the annual costumed parade of the senior class, the performance by the Georgia Glee and Instrumental club, banquets by certain of the fraternities and exclusive clubs of the university, the Georgia-Vanderbilt baseball games and college initiations.

But the house parties and beautiful girls are but one of the big numbers on a big program with many other big events. The annual convention of the southern province of the Phi Delta Theta convention begins its session with the university chapter of the fraternity Thursday, and among some of the more widely-known men on the program who will attend various sessions of the convention lasting through Saturday, are Will H. Hays, Governor Thomas W. Hardwick and Fred R. Cowles.

A series of three dances, the annual costumed parade of the university senior class, the performance of the Georgia Glee and Instrumental club, the Georgia-Vanderbilt baseball games, college initiations and other festivities are on the program that has emerged only after months of arduous labor on the parts of the various leaders in university life.

Hundreds of members of the fraternity from all over Eta chapter, which includes Georgia and Alabama and other southern states, will be in Athens for the convention, the most brilliant session of which will be the banquet at the Georgian hotel Thursday evening, when Mr. Hays, Governor Hardwick, Mr. Cowles and T. W. Reed of the University of Georgia, are slated to speak.

A tea-dance of the fraternity at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon will be one of the delightful social events of the convention, assembling the visiting girls and boys in the Classic City.

While the official program is in itself filled to the extent that it will hardly be possible for any other events to be staged, it is believed that many parties and luncheons not known of now will be parts of the week-end program.

A number of the fraternities are giving house parties, having as their guests Georgia girls. The following is a list of those fraternities with the girls attending.

Stories of "Pagliacca" And "Secret of Suzanne"

Wolf-Ferrari's Opera,
"THE SECRET OF SUZANNE"
(In Italian)

Count .....Mr. Scotti
Sante .....Mr. Paltrinieri
Conductor, Mr. Papi.

The first presentation in Atlanta of "The Secret of Suzanne" (Il Segreto Di Susanna), an opera in one act, music by Ermanno Wolf-Ferrari, the book by Max Kalbeck, after the French of Golisciana. (Sung in Italian). First presented in America by the Metropolitan in 1911.

Called by the composer, "An interlude in one act," "The Secret of Suzanne" is a refreshing drawing room comedy. Introducing only three characters, and one of these a mute, without a note to sing, the opera will thus emphasize in a delightful manner the first appearance this season of two of Atlanta's greatest favorites, Lucretia Bori, in the part of the adorable Susanna, and Antonio Scotti, as her adoring, and consequently madly jealous husband, Count Gil.

The part of Sante, the dumb servant, who shares, but keeps the secret of Susanna, is to be taken by Giordana Paltrinieri.

The scene is laid in a handsome apartment of the count's palace. Count Gil, who does not smoke, and who is unreasonably jealous of his pretty wife, smells the odor of a cigarette, and suspects that she is in love with some one else. He questions the servant, Sante, who loyally hides his knowledge that his mistress herself is an ardent cigarette smoker.

Susanna enters, and Count Gil, while protesting love, embrasses her, and notices that even her clothing is full of the hated cigarette smoke. He accuses her of having a secret from him, and Susanna, believing that he has discovered her passion for smoking, and that he considers her unwomanly and bold, becomes confused and embarrassed, and her blushes are taken by the hasty count as an acknowledgment of love for another man. This brings on a scene where the count's anger betrays him into breaking the furniture, and he dramatically orders her to leave the house, while Sante makes repeated attempts to straighten and repair the furniture.

Susanna, by her pleading and soft words has just about satisfied the count, when an unfortunate remark makes his anger blaze forth again, and this time the petulant Gil himself leaves.

Susanna, left by herself, lights the lamp and then sings "Che palpiti," to show how unreasonable jealousy can be.

Sante enters bringing her a package of cigarettes, and she is just commencing to enjoy her smoke when she hears her husband returning and throws her lighted cigarette in the fireplace, where Gil discovers it immediately, and begins to search for an intruder. Sante, enjoying the joke, pretends to help the count, who finding his own umbrella and believing it to be a proof that someone is hiding, smashes it in a fury.

When the count goes again, Susanna once more consoles herself with a cigarette, and on Count Gil's return, he finds her smoking, and instead of the anger Susanna dreads, he promises her that in the future he will join her in her smokes, and all is joy and reconciliation as the count lights one of Susanna's cigarettes for her and one for himself and they peaceably enjoy their first smoke together.

Leoncavallo's Opera
"PAGLIACCI"
(In Italian)

Nedda ..... Miss Muzio
Silvio ..... Mr. Reschiglian
Tonio ..... Mr. De Luca
Beppe ..... Mr. Bada
Canio ..... Mr. Sanazar
Conductor, Mr. Bamboschek.

The scene of the story is laid in Calabria at the time of the Feast of the Virgin di Mezzagosto. During the prelude Tonio comes forward, as in the prologue of ancient Greek tragedy, and explains that the subject of the play is taken from real life, and that the composer has devoted himself to expressing the sentiment, good or bad, but always human, of the characters he introduces, without commenting on their social condition. He then makes a sign for the curtain to rise.

The first act snows the meeting of two roads at the entrance of a village; at the right a traveling theater. Villagers greet the arrival of a troupe of strolling players. Canio, the Punchinello, and chief of the little troupe, invites the crowd to attend the performance at seven o'clock, and then goes off with Beppe (the Harlequin) and several peasants to drink at the tavern. Tonio the clown remains behind to care for the donkey, but takes advantage of Canio's absence to declare his love to Nedda, who is the Columbine of the troupe, and also Canio's wife. Upon being pressed for a kiss, she strikes Tonio with a whip, and he goes off vowing to be revenged. Then Silvio, a rich young villager, joins Nedda and tries to induce her to leave her husband, and the forlorn life of a stroller, which she loathes, to run away with him. Tonio espies the lovers, and runs to fetch Canio the husband. They return in time to hear Nedda's parting words to Silvio in which she appoints to meet him at night. Canio breaks from the restraining hands of Tonio to attack Silvio, but the latter succeeds in escaping over the wall without being recognized. Canio, baffled and jealous, orders Nedda to tell the name of her lover; but she refuses, and Canio is about to stab her, when Beppe interferes, persuades Nedda to go to the theatre to dress for her part, and induces Canio to be calm and prepare for the performance. The act closes with a cry of despair from Canio, who is obliged to act a comedy with death in his very soul.

In the second act the peasants arrive to witness the performance. By chance this proves to be a burlesque of all that has taken place in the first act. Tonio, who plays the part of the idiot servant, makes a declaration of love to Columbine (Nedda), which she receives with scorn. Harlequin (Beppe), in love with Columbine, then appears, but after a short interview is nearly surprised by the Pagliaccio (Canio), who arrives just as Columbine is helping Harlequin to run away, and hears her repeat to him the very words which she had used to Silvio when she bade him meet her after the play that night. At this Canio loses his head, forgets his part, and furiously demands the name of her lover. Nedda laughs in order to put the public off the scent, and they, failing to grasp the truth, are much amused. Suddenly, however, Canio, beside himself with rage and jealousy, seizes the knife on the table and stabs Nedda to the heart, declaring that she will reveal the name of her lover with her last despairing cry. She calls to Silvio for help, and he attempts to reach her, but is attacked by Canio, who slays him also. The peasants disarm Canio, who says, stupefied, "The comedy is finished."

French Styles to Prevail Over English, Says Expert

A tendency of French styles to prevail over English in clothing for men and women this season is noticed by Miss Mae McClure, associate editor of Harper's Bazar, who is in the city gathering data on southern styles.

Miss McClure is now touring the south, visiting the leading cities and interviewing the leading merchants to ascertain what is preferred by southern women in the way of wearing apparel this season.

"This is an undecided season of colors," said Miss McClure. "There are so many shades in vogue that a gathering reminds one very much of a flower garden. White prevails at present, and the indications are that black and white will be the leading colors for the summer."

Miss McClure, having spent several days in Atlanta, gave some of her impressions of the fashions which are followed here.

"Southern women have a feminine touch that is charming, and I find it especially so in Atlanta. Your women appear well informed, indeed, with respect to what well dressed persons are wearing. A taste and discernment that is unusual is reflected in their clothes.

"The prevalence of the straight line silhouette is noticeable in the fashions for this year," she continued, "although there continues a demand for the youthful model. The old-fashioned basque waist, made of printed crepes, with the skirts often wired on either side and dropping full and loosely, is still popular.

"The propensity of the dinner evening gown often is to touch the floor from a loop at the side and again they are made long and lifted. Gloves are back in vogue again—the quaint, old-fashion of lace mittens in many colors. The most fetching dainty sunshades are used, and small silk fans and caprice handkerchiefs."

Atlanta Club to Invite Convention of Federation

BY LOUISE DOOLY.

The executive board, Georgia Federation of Women's clubs, at its regular meeting yesterday at the Atlanta Woman's club, voted to endorse the plan now being perfected by the Atlanta Woman's club to invite the General Federation of Women's clubs to hold its convention in 1923 in Atlanta.

The suggestion was made by Mrs. B. M. Boykin, a member of the state board and president of the Atlanta Woman's club, which club will act as the hostess organization, the invitation to be extended to the General Federation at its meeting at Chautauqua in June.

This convention usually brings together many thousands of the most representative women in the United States.

The significance of their coming to Georgia may thus be easily inferred..

The state president will instruct delegates to the 1922 convention to be held at Chautauqua in June to support the invitation the Woman's club, and the southeastern council of federated club women has already expressed its desire to give its aid to any movement that would bring the convention to this section.

Officers Elected.

At the board meeting Mrs. Samuel M. Inman was re-elected director for Georgia, General Federation of Women's clubs; Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens, was elected second vice president of the Georgia Federation, to succeed Mrs. J. S. Howkens, of Savannah, whose term of office is over, and the appointment of a transportation chairman for the Georgia delegation to the biennial of the General Federation in June was left to the president.

The nominating committee was composed of Mrs. A. P. Brantley, Mrs. Walter Purdon, Mrs. H. H. McCall, Mrs. John M. Graham and Mrs. R. H. Hankinson.

Convention Dates.

October 11, 12, 13 was decided upon as the dates of the state convention, to be held in Athens. The date was postponed by Mrs. Snelling, of Athens, chairman for the convention, who stated that the clubwomen and the whole city of Athens are anticipating with pleasure the entertainment of the clubwomen of the state.

Mrs. Hays' Campaign.

Discussion of campaign plans following up the indorsement of Mrs. Hays, state president, for the office of recording secretary, was led by Mrs. Nichols Peterson, of Tifton, chairman of the campaign committee, and Mrs. Peterson, who has attended all national conventions and national council meetings of the general federation for 12 years, instructed the board members as to the directest and most effectual methods of securing the same universal support for Mrs. Hays in the general federation that she has received from her own state. She especially urged as the most essential thing the sending of a complete delegation from Georgia to Chautauqua, and aggressive campaign work both at the biennial at Chautauqua, when the election takes place, and in the intervening weeks.

The clubs of the state are notified by order of the board that the names of delegates to the biennial be sent to Mrs. Inman, general federation director. The board voted that Mrs. Hays, state president, and Georgia's candidate for general federation office, be sent to Chautauqua as the guest of the Georgia federation. A part of the expenses of Mrs. Peterson, chairman of the campaign committee, will also be paid by the federation.

It was also emphasized that no club can send a delegate which has not paid its general federation dues to the state treasurer, and sent its constitution and by-laws, names of officers and date of organization to the general federation director by May 1.

Made in Georgia.

A report by Mrs. Newton C. Wing, chairman of Made in Georgia week, May 22, revealed the rapid spread of interest throughout the state in this campaign, and she urged the active co-operation of all clubwomen to make it a complete success. She wore a very smart costume, all of which—hat, gingham dress, hose and shoes—she announced were made in Georgia.

Loan Fund.

A resolution introduced by Mrs. Joseph Myers, of Albany, chairman of home economics, which proposed a loan fund to educate Georgia girls at the college of agriculture to become home economics agents in the counties of Georgia, this loan fund to be raised through the appropriation by the Georgia magazine of 50 cents out of every $1 subscription, this fund to be applied through the students' aid foundation.

The resolution was passed, with the exception of a clause which provided that the $1,000 loans must be paid back within a year.

Mrs. William H. Fleming, of Augusta, chairman for health, proposed that the health week, for which the idea was indorsed by the state convention, she hoped it would be possible to put through beginning on Mothers' day in May. The clubwomen in promoting health week will have the support of the state health board.

State Legislation.

Mrs. Robert L. Berner, of Macon, state chairman of legislation, who is also chairman of the state legislative council, reported that the state legislation the council expects to work for this year under instruction from the various state bodies represented will include a eugenics or marriage bill, a bill for the protection of women in industry and the state bond issue for good roads.

The board voted to instruct Mrs. Berner to place before the council also promotion of a bill to permit counties to appropriate money for the payment of county demonstration agents, and a bill to abolish the fee system of paying county officers.

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, chairman of the division of citizenship, General Federation, urged that the citizenship work of the club women be intensified and increased, and that the clubs seek the leadership in their studies of such experts as Prof. Sibley of the University of Georgia. She also urged that reports be made of their citizenship work to the state chairman. Every good report will raise the prestige of the Georgia Federation with the General Federation. Especially did she urge the universal observance in Georgia of the Fourth of July as citizenship day.

Mrs. Omar F. Elder, chairman of Child Welfare; Mrs. T. T. Stevens, treasurer for Tallulah Falls school, speaking for Mrs. Hugh Willet; Mrs. H. B. Wey, chairman Student Aid, and other members, made important reports, these to be quoted later on The Constitution's club page.

Mrs. Howard H. McCall, a member of the executive board, and recently elected a vice president of the national society, D. A. R., was given a cordial congratulatory reception.

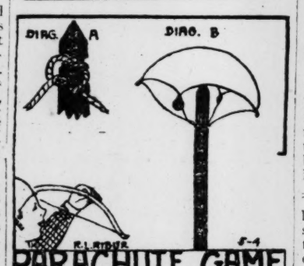
Board Luncheon.

At 10 o'clock the Atlanta members of the board entertained the out-of-town members at a delightful luncheon, the dainty meal prepared in the woman's club cuisine. The afternoon session was held in the beautiful new auditorium in order that the out-of-town women might see it.

The Children's Hour



Since our interest today is undoubtedly turning skyward, the children will enjoy this "Parachute Game."

Get a stick about ten inches long and as thick as a pencil. Point it at one end. Two inches from this end cut a groove. Tie a piece of strong cord sixteen inches long, around this groove. Use a square knot. (Diagram A shows how a square knot is made). Have the ends, which remain, of even length. Tie another piece of cord the same length, in the same groove. Have the square knot come opposite to the other knot with the end of this piece even also.

You then have four ends all of the same length. Tie these ends to the four corners of an old handkerchief, man's size, or to a piece of muslin the same size. (Diagram B.)

When you have several of these made, go out of doors where there are not many people. Place the center of the handkerchief over the center of the stick. Now use the parachute like an arrow, and shoot it into the air. Watch what happens when it comes down.

THO' PARIS TALKS FAST, AMERICA SETS PACE

Paris talks so fast, so steadily and so cleverly on style, that the rest of the world sits back and listens. However, by dint of real worth of its knitted wear America managed to get a word in edgewise to tell the world about it. So it is that women in France, in China, in Australia are wearing the same swagger knitted togs that smartly dressed American women are wearing; if they know what's ultra fashionable.

Shivers-Hardwick Wedding Is Brilliant Church Event

A brilliant marriage of wide social interest throughout the state was that of Miss Caroline Walton Shivers and Richard Holmes Hardwick, formerly of Cedartown, which took place Wednesday evening at the Ponce de Leon avenue Baptist church.

The ceremony was performed by Dr. Ashby Jones at 6 o'clock in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends.

Church Decorations.

The elaborate decorations were of handsome palms and Easter lilies. The organ railing was hung with graceful ropes of southern smilax and bamboo interspersed by white burning tapers. The choir loft and chancel were transformed into a bower of rich greenery, by large banks of palms joined together by gracefully arranged ropes of smilax. Massive cathedral candelabra held white lighted tapers and were placed on either side of a large bank of Easter lilies and baskets of peonies. Altar vases of Easter lilies and peonies outlined the chancel and altar. A program of appropriate music was rendered preceding the entrance of the bridal party.

Bridal Attendants.

The bridesmaids entered in pairs and wore beautiful gowns of chiffon in the rainbow shades over flesh-colored satin and carried cascade beaded bouquets of snapdragons, pink and yellow roses and blue cornflowers. The gowns were elaborately beaded in a rose design of crystals and were fashioned with girdles of entwined silver ribbon. The bridesmaids were Misses Katherine Dickey and Nel Sims, who wore turquoise blue chiffon; Misses Wilmotine Perdue and Ernestine Campbell, whose gowns were canary chiffon, and Mrs. William McKenzie and Miss Kate Roberts, of Eufaula, who were gowned in green chiffon.

Miss Mary Asbury, of New Orleans, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a beautiful gown of flesh-colored chiffon over a chiffon foundation with an elaborate beaded design in crystal iridescent beads. Completing this costume was a cascade bouquet of roses, snapdragons and cornflowers in the pastel shades.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Chester Boothe Blakeman, wore an exquisite costume of orchid chiffon beaded in crystals and carried a cascade beaded bouquet of pink and yellow roses, snapdragons and blue cornflowers.

Little Louise Shivers, sister of the bride, and Virginia Hall, sister of the groom, were flower girls and wore beautiful hand-made frocks of pink georgette trimmed with ribbons in the pastel shades. They carried baskets of pink and yellow roses showered with pastel shaded flowers.

The little ring bearer was Dorothy Shivers, who wore a dainty frock formed of petals of georgette; from one shoulder hung a shower of orange blossoms and a wreath of orange blossoms was worn in the hair.

Richard Garlington acted as best man and the groomsmen were Dr. Harry Vaughan, Dr. H. W. McDonald, William McCarty, Charles Smith, of Cedartown; E. H. Miller, Jr., Max Tupper and Harry Bewick.

The following were ushers: Charles Nunnally, Rucker McCarty, James L. Dickey, Jr., Gus Ryan, C. J. Lewis and James H. Whitten.

Beautiful Bride.

The bride entered the church with her father, by whom she was given in marriage, and was radiantly beautiful in her wedding gown of white chiffon over bridal satin, modeled after the wedding robe of Princess Mary. The waist was hand-embroidered in an elaborate design of crystals and seed pearls, the center of each motif being formed of pale blue crystals. The bodice showed the batteau neckline which was fashioned without sleeves. The skirt effecting the irregular lengths was trimmed with four lnog panels hanging below the hem of the skirt, and these also beaded with a crystal motif. The girdle was formed of chiffon in graceful folds. The train was of tulle from the shoulders far below the waistline and from these on satin formed the court train. Bordering the sides was pearl embroidery and the upper part of the tulle train cascaded over the arms. The veil of tulle and lace was showered with orange blossoms and caught to her soft hair by a spray of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of orchids and valley lilies in shower effect. The gift of the groom was a platinum bracelet of diamonds and sapphires, and a rope of pearls, an heirloom, given the bride by her aunt, Mrs. A. F. Latimer, of Athens, Ga.

Dinner at Club.

A dinner given by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lester L. Shivers, at the Piedmont Driving club followed the wedding ceremony and assembled the bridal attendants, immediate families and out-of-town guests.

The elaborately appointed table was arranged in the large dining room. The central decoration was a sunken garden effect of palms, smilax and baskets of pink roses and other flowers in the pastel shades. Garlands of smilax were gracefully arranged on the table and at intervals were silver candlesticks holding pink lighted tapers with pink shades. Hand-painted cards marked the place of each guest.

Mrs. Shivers was handsomely gowned in white satin and lace with corsage of white sweetpeas.

Mrs. H. M. Hall, mother of the groom, wore a handsome gown of black lace veiling black satin and a corsage of orchids.

Mrs. Darden Asbury, of New Orleans, was gowned in black lace combined with satin.

Mrs. A. F. Latimer, of Athens, was gowned in white brocaded satin.

Mrs. Everard Richardson, Jr., was gowned in blue tulle embroidered in iridescent bead design, veiling cloth of gold.

Mrs. F. P. Garlington's gown was French blue chiffon, veiling satin.

Mrs. Everard Richardson, Sr., wore black chantilly lace draped over black satin.

Prominent Families.

The bride is the beautiful and popular daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester L. Shivers. She is graduate of the 1920 class of Washington seminary, where she was a member of the Phi Pi sorority, Bull Dog society and the Alice Chandler Literary society, later attending "Oaksmere," Miss Merrill's Fashionable School for Girls, in New York.

She is an acknowledge belle not only in social circles of her own city, but wherever she visits and is a charming member of the Debutante club of 1921-22.

Mrs. Hardwick is the granddaughter of the late George W. Hollinshead, of Milledgeville, Ga., and the late John H. Shivers. Her parental ancestors include the McBride's Lasen and the Milners, of Virginia, and on her maternal side she is descended from the Hammonds, the Forts and a direct descendant of the Waltons, George Walton being a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Hall, formerly Miss Estelle Jones, who is a descendant of a long and distinguished line of ancestors, among whom are Dr. E. E. Jones, of Madison, Ga., and Dr. W. H. Peek, of Cedartown, Ga. His sister, Mrs. R. L. Smith, of Silver City, New Mexico, was formerly Miss Florence Hardwick, a southern belle and beauty. Mr. Hardwick is a cousin of Dr. Everett Richardson.

His parental ancestors were men of marked financial ability and his grandfather, the late C. L. Hardwick, Sr., of Cleveland, Tenn., was president of the Cleveland Woolen mills, the Hardwick Stove company and the Hardwick lead mills.

Mr. Hardwick has made an enviable reputation in business since leaving college. He attended school at Riverside Military Academy in Gainesville, Ga.; Kentucky Military institute and later continued his studies in Washington, D. C.

In 1916 Mr. Hardwick served a year with the ambulance corps on the Mexican border and during the world war rendered efficient service to his country in the medical corps of the U. S. A., being stationed at Allentown, Pa.; Hoboken, N. J., and in Washington, D. C.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Pockets.

Before putting aprons and dresses into the wash, brush out the pockets with the whiskbroom. They will be easier to wash and come out cleaner.

String the Buttons.

If you will always string sets of buttons on fine wire or thread when putting them away for future use, a great deal of time will be saved when you start to hunt in the button box.

When Baking.

Spread a newspaper on the floor in the kitchen or pantry when baking. The flour falling on the floor can then be taken up easily with the paper and the time and labor saved are worth considering.

Storing Winter Clothes.

Winter clothing to be stored for the summer should be thoroughly cleaned. Moths and insects favor soiled spots. Also press the materials, as the heat of the iron will kill any moths or moth eggs which may be present.

After Cooking Fish.

If you have not time to wash thoroughly in soda water the utensils you have used in preparing and cooking fish, just hold them close to the fire or near the gas for a few seconds, allowing the whole surface to get equally heated, and the odor will disappear.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE DOCTOR'S ORDERS

A friend of mine once gave his doctor a surprise.

He had been attacked with eczema, an annoying affliction which, as everyone knows, it sometimes takes years to get rid of. The doctor told him what to do in regard to diet, use of ointments, and so forth, and told him to come again in a month to let him see what progress he had made. When he went back he was completely cured.

"Great goodness, man," said the doctor, "I never knew a case to clear up so quickly. What did you do?"

"Exactly what you told me to," said the patient.

A Shock.

"Well," said the doctor, "that explains it. You're one man in a thousand. The other 999 do about half what I tell them to, or perhaps 60 per cent at the best, and 10 per cent at the worst. I've got over expecting anyone to do exactly what I tell them."

Yet that man is a specialist and charges a large fee for his advice. What fools we mortals be, to go out and pay for a thing and then by the way we use it destroy most of its value!

Think We're Smart.

And then on top of that we rather fancy our own cleverness in having done it. Haven't you often heard people tell of how they outwitted the doctor, with evident relish of their own wit?

"Yes, he told me not to smoke more than three cigars a week, but I felt sure he must have made a mistake and meant three a day, so I've corrected his mistake for him." Or, "The doctor says I ought to walk at least four miles a day, but I'd like to see his wife walk four miles a day. I think it's all nonsense, this fad about doing so much walking. Those things can be overdone. I told him I would try to, but the only time I did it I was so lame! I shan't be such a fool again, no matter what he says."

I know a woman for whom a specialist prescribed a corrective corset. She paid the specialist a good sum for prescribing it. She went to the city several times for measurings and fittings and paid a staggering sum for the same. With it came elaborate printed directions for putting it on and lacing it so that it would do good and not harm.

How She Adjusted It.

She promptly decided that these were altogether too much bother. "Why, it would take ten minutes to put them on that way," she said. "I'm not going to be bothered with any such nonsense." And as she said it she had an air of putting the silly person who wrote those directions in his place.

I am somehow reminded by such people of the story of the two workmen, one of whom bet the other he could carry him up a ladder to the top of a ten-story building in his mason's hod. Mike won the bet, but when they arrived safely, said Pat (they belonged, you see, to the standing army of Mikes and Pats who make existence possible for comic pages and comic weeklies), "Well, you've won but begorry, when your foot slipped up there at the ninth story I thought I had ye."

MARGOT ASQUITH SEES AMERICA

Woman with the serpent's tongue, frank and fearless as when she wrote diary that rocked England's aristocracy, tells her American impressions—Daring comments on society people—Intimate descriptions of nation's leaders.

Discusses Flappers and "Snugglepupping." American Voices and Humor on This Side of Atlantic.

BY MARGOT ASQUITH,
Wife of the ex-Prime Minister of Great Britain.

If the newspapers and their reporters are to be believed, there is tremendous interest in America in the subject of the young girls and their recently acquired freedom. In every city I visited, "What do you think about flappers?" was a question invariably asked by the pressman.

When the oft repeated inquiry came up, I listened with absent mind and without committing myself to a subject that, while disturbing the morals of the female questioners, bored me to such an extent that I almost screamed when it was mentioned.

So I am ashamed to say that I gave in reply little that could be called sensational copy. It was evident that I was expected to be shocked at the frank display of feminine legs, at the almost universal custom of "bobbing" the hair and of the freedom of their association with young men and boys.

The subject finally appeared to be of such interest that I resolved to observe the flappers closely on my travels. There were seldom any in the audiences at my lectures, and for the most part the flapper, in the American sense of the word, is of the schoolgirl age (though often she is employed) and, of course, would find little to interest her in anything I might say.

With us at home, the word "flapper" means originally (and that was before the war) what Americans at that time called sub-debs. The word obviously comes from the analogy of a young bird, and as young girls a few years ago in America were called "chickens," the adoption of the restrictive word "flapper" was logical.

A Close-Up of the Flapper.

So much for etymology. The subject, so interesting to Americans, I found only partly worth while studying.

As I said, I had few chances to get a close acquaintance iwth American flappers in the ordinary routine of my day. But at Buffalo, in a sunny street outside the station, I got my first close view of her.

There were two young, short-skirted, giggling girls, walking with their admirers, who were armed with kodaks.

One of the young men threw a girl over his shoulder with her legs straight out while the other photographed them. I was glad to realize that, while praying that I would never again be interviewed upon the subject, I would be in a better position to answer my fervent questioners in the future.

In Chicago, I was told that the people had many important problems of a civic nature to discuss and settle. Yet I found the citizens, if one might judge by their newspaper headlines, holding indignation meetings on such subjects as:

"Blame Girls for 'Snugglepupping' and 'Petting Parties.'"

"Male Flappers' Parents Hold Indignation Meeting."

"Boys Who Don't Follow Fair Companions' Pace Called Sissies, Poor Boobs and Flat Tires."

It was while I was traveling that I came across Lord Lee's criticism of something I was reported to have said earlier in my lectures regarding the violation of the prohibition laws by the young women of America. It was as follows:

LORD LEE DEFENDS AMERICAN YOUNG WOMEN

"Calls Mrs. Asquith's Charges Cruel, Ludicrous, and Untrue.

"Speaking at the English-Speaking Union luncheon, Lord Lee said the statement attributed to the famous country-women of his, now in the United States, was as cruel as it was ludicrous and untrue. He added that he could testify from thirty years of personal observation in America, and from reliable information from various quarters, and that he was speaking seriously."

Lord Lee has only got to be in America ten days to change his opinion. I have received signed letters from every quarter of the country thanking me for expressing my opinion and will quote from one:

New York City, 1922.

"Madam,

"If you wish for very substantial proof of the exactitude of your remark that maidens get drunk at dances, all you have to do is to send someone, unobtrusively to --(I am not going to give the name of the lady or the hotel)--- to obtain from the waiters and waitresses an account of the lamentable condition in which scores of the girls were taken home after two recent balls held in the Hotel ---, one of the most fashionable hotels in the suburbs of New York.

"It was not the fault of the management, and I am told no more dances of the sort will be permitted there.

"I am a very disgusted sister of one of the young girls, and am trying to dissuade her from accepting intoxicants at these parties."

This is only one of many letters I received on this subject.

Voices and Humor.

I do not think the voices in America, either of the flappers or their elders, are generally musical; they are nasal and noisy and, though Americans have a great deal of geniality and love of fun, I am so slow at picking up the "American language" that I think I probably miss much of the irony and "finesse" that characterizes our better kind of humor.

The Canadians, who are of British stock, have a better sense of humour; but humor is always a dangerous subject to write about, and when I refute laughter of our public in the theatres at home I feel I had better walk warily.

I am Scotch, and as a nation we have been accused of lack of humor; I cannot be expected to agree with this, nevertheless I remember being told in my youth of one man who said, "Oh! aye; Jock undoubtedly jokes; but he jokes with facility. I joke too, but with difficulty."

The French have a far finer sense of humor than any other nation in the world, and all they say is a constant source of amusement to me.

It is pardonable not to laugh at what is funny, but sudden guffaws at bad jokes is a true test of a sense of humor.

In the following excerpt from a Cincinnati paper there is a subtle touch, perhaps, that is missed by the dullest of us!

"Margot Asquith, wife of the former prime minister of England, is in Cincinnati.

"Men who like to believe that they know more than their wives would be happy with a woman like Margot for a wife. She knows more than most men, and there is scarcely anything she cannot or will not talk about.

"She wrote a book that is an encyclopedia of the inside history of British politics and history of her time.

"There aren't many like Margot. Husbands who long after the honeymoon like to be entertained will envy Asquith his Margot. It must be pleasant to have a Margot in the house."

I expect the writer was pulling my leg—to use a slang expression—or possibly pitying my husband, but it amused me.

The Senate at Work.

On my second visit to Washington, hoping to get some "inside" history of "American politics," I went one afternoon to the senate.

The Four Power Treaty was being discussed, but the debate was languid, and more seats were unoccupied than senators speaking.

Except for a Tribune, the senate is like the "Chambre" in Paris; everyone walks about, and you cannot be sure that any of the senators will speak from the seat that they occupied the day before, which makes it rather confusing to a stranger.

The same day I went to see Mr. Hughes in the department of state. He is remarkably handsome, and has a striking intelligence, and charming manners, but as one of his delightful secretaries remained in the room we said nothing worth recording.

I told him what, alas! he must have heard a thousand times, that his opening speech on disarmament at the Washington conference had created a profound impression in my country, if not all over the world; and what perhaps he did not know so well, that there never was a clearer feeling than that which existed between England and America today.

When I say this with all the eloquence I can command at every lecture, though it is always cheered, it is seldom reported, and I read in one of the papers:

"What Mrs. Margot Asquith said about the handclasp of Great Britain and the United States is doubtful and conventional."

I am glad to be called conventional, but what I say is not doubtful; it is true.

Who's Who and What's Happened.

Sally Brabant, a society butterfly, has been given a year's leave of absence by her husband.

Richard Brabant, who hopes that she will learn something of life. She has a thrilling flirtation with

Keith Gilbert, who has always been labeled "dangerous," and is horrified to learn that, despite his position in society, he is a bootlegger. One of his men shoots a revenue officer, and Gilbert is held for murder. He escapes, taking Sally with him, but she is rescued by

Neal Calhoun, who gives her some good advice. She finds herself without funds, and, not knowing where her husband is, assumes the name of "Mrs. Pemberton," and obtains a position as chaperon to

Claire Finch, who has more money than manners. They go to a summer resort, where Clair falls in love with

Rex Mallory, the son of a wealthy automobile manufacturer, who prefers Sally. Sally goes to dinner at a roadhouse with Claire and Mallory, and in the dressing room finds a girl picking her pockets. The girl is the sister of the employee of Keith Gilbert, who was arrested for shooting a revenue officer and has resorted to desperate means to get money for a new trial for him. Sally promises to help her, so she goes to New York to consult Calhoun. She has luncheon with an old friend,

Patricia Lang, a modern flapper, who has recently eloped, and who is summoned home by a strange telephone call. Patricia's husband had been hurt in an accident; seeing them together, Sally realizes the depth of the girl's devotion and the change that love has made in her.

Sally returns to the hotel to find that during her absence Claire has been flirting with

CHAPTER LXIV.

The Wings of Romance.

Hastily Sally told Rex Mallory of the little dancer at the roadhouse whom she had promised to help.

"She doesn't really belong in such a place, and is there only because she is in desperate need of money, and had no other way of earning it," she explained. It seemed needless to tell him that the girl's brother was in prison, and that she was trying to earn money to get him a new trial. "She's a pretty litting thing, really a sweet little girl, and I'm eager to do something for her. I must see her before I leave here."

"Well, why not let me drive you over there right now?" he suggested. "Ralston's well out of the way for the evening—he was pretty well lit up when he left here, and with that new car to try out he won't show up again for hours. He was headed for Ridgely—that's a good 30 miles, and there's a detour on the way. So it's safe enough for you to be away for a little while.

Sally glanced through the long windows into the ballroom. Claire had been a guest at a dinner party given by one of the women at the hotel for her daughter. Flattered at being one of their guests, Claire was in her element. She would find her evening well occupied Sally decided.

"All right—I'll go," she told Mallory. "I'll run upstairs for a cloak, and meet you here in five minutes."

"All right—I'll telegraph home while you're gone," he replied.

Sally looked in on Claire once more. The girl was playing bridge now and seemed to be settled at the game for the evening. Surely it would be all right to slip away for a very little while, Sally told herself. The run to the roadhouse and back couldn't take more than an hour, at this time of night, with the roads clear. And it was in such a good cause that she was going!

Rex met her on the veranda, and together they went the back way to the garage, and slipped away in the roadster. Once out on the wide, moonlit highway, Sally drew a long breath of relief.

The road was clear, a wide, white ribbon stretching up over the hills in the moonlight. They flew over it, the engine purring so softly that its sound was hardly noticeable. And Sally found it easy to believe that somehow things would be arranged so that they must turn out right.

"I wired the folks," Mallory told her presently. "There ought to be an answer by the time we get back, and by this time tomorrow we can be on our way."

"Yes," agreed Sally. She felt sure that Claire would never dream of refusing to accept an invitation from the Mallorys; she would consider it a feather in her social cap. Sally smiled at herself then; not so very long ago she would not have dreamt of going to the home of people whom she did not know, on so casual an invitation. Now she was delighted to do so!

When they reached the Blue Kitten Inn the revue was on. Seating herself at a table near the door, Sally looked toward the dancing floor, where the performance was given. The lights were low, and lilting, seductive music floated through the room. Lithe, swaying figures, clad in grass skirts, scanty bodices, and garlands of flowers, held the eye. Among them Sally distinguished the girl whom she had come to help, yet did not even know.

Sally hastily scribbled a note on a scrap of paper and handed it to one of the waiters.

"Will you give this to that little girl—the one on the end?" she asked. Then, as he hesitated, frowning, "Oh, it's all right, truly; I'm a friend of hers, but she doesn't know that I'm here, and I want to see her as soon as possible."

"Well, I'll give it to her," he said at last, dubiously, and vanished through a swinging door nearby. He came back a few moments later and bent over Sally to say: "She'll meet you out on the veranda, the end toward the road, in five minutes."

She came pattering along the wide porch almost as soon as Sally and Rex Mallory reached it, still in her grass costume and flower garlands, but with a long cape drawn close about her. Sally had not realized before how little and helpless looking she was.

"I don't even know your name—but you know me, of course," Sally began, holding out her hand. "And this is a friend of mine, Mr. Mallory."

But the girl did not answer. She was staring at Rex Mallory, her very soul in her eyes. And Sally, turning to him, realized that he had met the one girl in the world.

NOW DO MY WORK WITH EASE

Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored My Health

Hornell, N.Y.—"I was in bad health but there didn't seem to be any one thing the matter with me. I was tired out all over and it was an effort for me to move. I was irritable and could not sleep nights and had trouble with my bowels and at my periods. It seemed that nearly every one around me knew of your medicine and wanted me to try it, so at last I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine and improved every day. I do all my own work now except the washing and do it with ease. I can accomplish as much in a day now as it would have taken me a week to do last winter and I try to get every one I know to take your medicine to build them up. You are welcome to use this letter as a testimonial if you like."—Mrs. CHAS. BAKER, 21 Spencer Ave., Hornell, N.Y.

In almost every neighborhood there are women who know of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They know because they have taken it and have been helped. Why don't you give it a trial?

"Nothing But the Truth."

(At the Forsyth.)

The certain embarrassments consequent upon the telling of the truth in and out of season are so generally recognized that nobody thinks of attempting it. Uncompromising veracity is so little a part of social intercourse that it lends itself naturally to farcical treatment in which consistent characterization may be ignored, as long as the situations are laughable—and the situations in "Nothing But the Truth" are laughable all the time.

"Nothing But the Truth" is proving to be one of the most popular attractions so far offered by the Forsyth players.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Lyric.)

Another specially selected and carefully arranged bill for the last three days of Keith's "Third of a Century" anniversary jubilee at Keith's Lyric theater promises to be one of the best bills presented at this playhouse this season, the headline attraction on the bill is an elaborate costume and scenic production. Gerber's review, a song, dance and musical revue, presented by four talented and accomplished artists, two men and two girls; Dennie O'Neil and "Sugarfoot" Gaffney, the popular "Georgia Boy," and former star of Neil O'Brien's minstrels, in a novel and unique blackface comedy skit, with songs and dances, "Sugarfoot" is tall, gangling fellow, with eccentric feet, mobile face and characteristic hands and, whether in song, story or an eccentric dance, he is sure to keep tuned up to the highest pitch of laughter.

Betty Compson.

(At the Howard)

The various locales in "The Green Temptation," Betty Compson's Paramount picture, directed by William D. Taylor, and showing at the Howard theater, take the spectator on a veritable Cook's tour, giving him intimate views of some of the most interesting places in the old world as well as the new. In the brief time required to run six reels, one gets in this picture a cross section of life that it is not the tourist's good fortune to see even after spending thousands of dollars in railway and steamship transportation.

"Foolish Wives."

"Foolish Wives," at the Rialto, enters on its last lap today, closing here Saturday night after a two weeks' showing.

An outstanding feature of the presentation of "Foolish Wives" here has been the manner in which it was handled. This picture was as widely heralded as any film that has come to Atlanta in many days, and after its arrival fulfilled all that had been promised for it.

"Smilin' Through."

(Next Week at Metropolitan.)

Norma Talmadge's production, "Smilin' Through," which will be the First National attraction at the Metropolitan theater next week, is said to be the most costly, elaborate and artistic photoplay yet made by that star.

New York, Long Island and California furnished backgrounds for the filming of Allen Langdon Martin's famous play, in which Jane Cowl appeared on the speaking stage.

In the east Norma used two great studios, one of which contained a day set and the other a night set, the company frequently working at 14-hour stretches under the direction of Sidney Franklin.

"The Silent Call."

(At the Criterion.)

The docile intuition with which a dog can take a part in a screen drama is the revelation which is amazing all photoplay followers who have seen "The Silent Call," H. O. Davis' presentation of the Laurence Trimble-Jane Murfin production released through Associated First National Pictures, Inc., which is being shown at the Criterion theater this week.

Unlike many human stars, Strongheart, the Belgian police dog, who takes the leading role in the production, is not a victim of temperament. His art is acting, and he is an actor first and dog afterwards.

"A Doll's House."

(At the Metropolitan.)

When Ibsen, the great Norwegian dramatist wrote into "A Doll's House" the story of Nora, the doll-wife of a placid and self-satisfied husband, he foresaw the development of woman into her present-day status, her present place in the world; he foresaw with remarkable vision the day when women would no longer be either mere love-making machines or discarded and worthless fragments of humanity; he knew that women would strive and conquer.

His Nora is the emblem of woman who has found herself. "A Doll's House" is a remarkable picture, telling a remarkable story in a remarkable way.

French scientists have obtained 14 per cent of sugar and 60 per cent of alcohol from a cactus that grows prolifically in Algeria.

Texas Guinan Here Famous Screen Star In Person at Loew's

As the principal feature of the bill at Loew's Grand theater for the last half of the week beginning today, Texas Guinan, the eminent stage and screen star, is to be present in person. Texas Guian, known as the female Bill Hart of the screen, together with a company of five people, will present a stirring one-act playlet, "Spitfire," based on a story of the west and abounding in thrilling situations.

Miss Guinan has appeared in many successful screen productions and also has been prominent in a number of big shows around New York. Her appearance with several shows at the Winter Garden in New York will be remembered by many.

Regarding the vaudeville act which she will offer at the Grand these next three days in conjunction with the showing of her two-reel picture, "Spitfire." It starts out as a western melodrama with a bad Mexican villain, a heroic Texas ranger, a comedy cowboy and a western plains bartender. From that as a flying start, not to speak of Texas herself in riding breeches and a 44 six-shooter making her entrance on a real horse, there develops a dime novel story about a holdup of the malls.

The heroic ranger beats up and subdues the Mexican terror and throws him out. There is an interval filled with comedy while Texas changes from riding boots to a spectacular ballroom dress of crimson. She sings a number alternately addressing the characters as "Sweetheart" as part of the lyrics and incidently making everybody jealous of everybody else.

Then the plot thickens. It appears that the ranger believes that Texas has robbed the mail the day before, and a very stirring situation develops in which Texas shows her dexterity in gun play. The interesting finish of the playlet is in the nature of a surprise—something entirely different from anything ever offered here.

In addition to the personal appearance of Miss Guinan the regular program of vaudeville and feature picture will be presented.

MONEY IS VOTED TO PURCHASE LAND IN NORTH GEORGIA

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON,
Constitution Bureau,
Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, April 26.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—Conferees on the agricultural appropriation bill agreed today to an item of $450,000 for purchase of lands in the Appalachian reserve.

This is of peculiar interest to Georgia, as several thousand acres of that forest are located in the state, and it is desirable to add new acreage to which the funds will be applied.

Representative Gordon Lee, of Georgia, member of the house appropriations committee, and one of the conferees on the agricultural appropriation bill, was responsible for the inclusion of this item. Mr. Lee is also a member of the national forestry commission.

TWENTY ARE KILLED IN FIRE AT MALAGA

Malaga, Spain, April 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—Twenty persons are known to have lost their lives and thirty were injured in a fire which swept the government buildings last night and was still burning today. It was learned the fire would spread to the customs house, in which great quantities of ammunition destined for use of the Spanish forces in Morocco were bored.

Ten policewomen are employed to prevent smuggling in Pekin, China.

Four Jurors Secured In Conspiracy Trial Of Governor Small

Waukegan, Ill., April 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—Four jurors were selected and sworn in today for the trial of Governor Len Small, charged with conspiracy to embezzle state interest money while he was state treasurer in 1917 and 1918.

Three native-born Americans and a native of Porto Rico comprise the first panel. Under Illinois laws juries are selected and sworn in groups of four.

The first panel was completed after sixty-four men had been examined. One juror came from the first venire of 100 called for Monday and the other three from the first sixteen men questioned today when a second venire of 100 reported. A third venire of 100 is to report tomorrow.

Lawyers for the state today announced that they expected to depend partially on circumstantial evidence in their case.

They made this announcement after Judge Clair C. Edwards had denied a challenge for a prospective juror who had said he would not convict a defendant on evidence of this class.

Governor Small personally approved the four selected for the first panel before his lawyers accepted them. The governor is following the examination closely and joined in every discussion of prospective jurors by the attorneys.

TESTIMONY TAKEN IN EASTLAKE TRIAL

Montross, Va., April 26.—The jury was completed and taking of testimony begun today in the trial here of Miss Sarah E. Knox, Baltimore nurse, on a charge of murdering Mrs. Margaret L. Eastlake at Colonial Beach last fall.

Several clashes between opposing counsel marked the presentation of the cases.

William C. Carrouthers, of Colonial Beach, one of the chief witnesses in the trial of Eastlake, who was indicted jointly with Miss Knox and acquitted at a separate trial, was the first witness called today. He testified that Miss Knox aroused him at 5:55 o'clock the morning of the murder and told him and his wife that Mrs. Eastlake had been "shot." He related in detail conversations he held that morning with the defendant and with Eastlake, and identified the stained hatchet and raincoat found in the yard of the Eastlake residence shortly after the murder. He said he saw "a very little if any at all" bloodstains on Miss Knox's clothing.

Lieutenant John Duff, U. S. N. medical corps, stationed at the Dahlgren proving grounds, gave detailed testimony as to his examination of Mrs. Eastlake's body. The jury includes ten farmers, a plumber and a merchant

ALLEGED DANCE HALL TIGER IS UNDER BOND

Pete Brown, proprietor of a fruit stand at 532 Peachtree street, who was arrested on charges of selling whisky to Georgia Tech students and patrons of dance halls in the neighborhood, waived trial before United States Commissioner W. C. Carter and was released under $300 bond Wednesday.

DISCHARGED AGENT SCORES DAUGHERTY

Washington, April 26.—W. O. Watts, special agent of the department of justice, who was removed from office Monday by direction of Attorney General Daugherty "for disloyalty to the department" in that he had given information as to alleged government irregularities in war contract inquiries to a member of congress, made public today through Representative Johnson, republican, South Dakota, "an open letter" to Mr. Daugherty.

"It is particularly gratifying to me to note," he wrote, "that you did not feel warranted or have the moral courage to charge me with disloyalty to the government. This you cannot do. My loyalty to the government is of life-long standing. I have followed and defended the flag in the Spanish-American war, the Philippine insurrection and the late war. My record of loyalty is well known and unimpeachable."

Declaring his conception of loyalty was protection of government interests under all circumstances, Mr. Watts added:

"If you are at all informed on the departmental affairs of your high office you must be aware of the outstanding facts that I have devoted more than two years to loyal and faithful efforts to protect the interests of the government when a committee of certain governmental officials and other common crooks have been assaulting and raiding the public treasury on a scale so gigantic as to be almost unbelievable.

"You have seen fit in the prosecution of the war graft cases to deprive the government of the services of men who have served their country in both peace and war and to surround yourself in this great work by men who sought and secured exemption from military service when these crimes were being committed. You are entitled to share with yourself your conceptions of loyalty and the people can judge whether or not the stigma you have attempted to place upon myself and my children is just."

Barns Destroyed.

Bowman, Ga., April 26.—(Special.) Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the warehouse of J. A. Ginn and T. O. Flemming here today. Mr. Ginn's warehouse contained 36 bales of cotton and approximately two hundred fifty bushels corn besides some farm implements, the cotton being partially covered with insurance. Mr. Fleming's warehouse contained about 36 tons of commercial fertilizer with no insurance carried thereon. No insurance was carried on either building.

RADIO BRINGS BACK IMMORTAL ARTISTS

Caruso and Other Great Musicians Long Dead Are Heard as in Life by Radiophone Listeners.

BY STEWART F. GELDERS.

Caruso lived again last night for thousands of music lovers from Cuba to the Great Lakes, from the rolling Atlantic to the crags of the Rocky mountains. Thousands felt again the thrill of his golden voice in the tragically beautiful "Canio's Lament," the "sob song" from Pagliacci. The Victrola and radio together made possible the seeming reincarnation of the greatest tenor of all time.

The "Concert of the Immortals," broadcasted by WGM last night with the co-operation of the Cable Piano company, was one of the most signal triumphs of many that have been achieved by The Constitution's radio service. Enrico Caruso, Evan Williams, Maud Powell, Adeline Patti, Pol Plancon and Francesco Tamagno, great artists on whose mortal parts the implacable stage director, Death, has long drawn the curtain of the Unknown, were alive again, for the hour.

Through thousands of miles of space their voices vibrated on the speeding radio waves, touching here and there an aerial and sensitive receiver plate that trembled in response and translated for the listener's ear the beautiful cadences just as they had come, years before, from the melodious throats and sonorous strings of the Victor immortals.

The concert was opened at 9:15 o'clock by Enrico Caruso in "Canio's Lament," from Pagliacci. Then Evan Williams sang Tosti's "Good-bye," the swan song of the great composer and the last tune that Williams sang before he died. Adeline Patti sang "The Last Rose of Summer," the tuneful ballad by Thomas Moore, which runs through the opera, "Martha." Pol Plancon, the basso, who died in 1914, was heard in the "Serenade Mephistofele," from "Faust." Francesco Tamagno in "The Death of Otello" awakened memories of what seems now to have been almost an earlier generation. He died in 1905.

Two stirring violin numbers were the "Barcarolle," by Maud Powell, and the "Mazurka," by Miss Erika Morini, acclaimed the greatest woman violinist since Maud Powell by a committee of judges named before her death by the great artist herself. Miss Morini used the same instrument on which Powell played herself to immortality.

John McCormack, who is ill and probably will not be heard on the concert stage for several months, sang "The Barefoot Trail."

The concert was closed by Caruso with the passionately tender notes of "A Dream," by Bartlett, one of his most popular English-speaking records.

The regular news and markets service was broadcast at 6 o'clock yesterday evening.

Another grand opera concert for tonight is announced elsewhere in this morning's paper.

FIFTEEN MINUTES OF RADIO EACH DAY

REACTANCE AND IMPEDANCE

The steady flow of direct current in a circuit encounters only the ordinary or ohmic resistance of the circuit. When an alternating current flows in a circuit, it meets with another form of resistance known as REACTANCE. If the circuit in which an alternating current flows contains a coil of wire, the interlinkage of the magnetic lines of force of any one of the turns, with adjacent turns, causes a counter-electromotive force to be developed which opposes the impressed electromotive force and consequently retards the flow of current. If the current decreases, however, the counter-electromotive force opposes the decrease and tends to maintain the original flow of current.

As previously explained, this opposition is due to self-induction and the resistance which it offers to the flow of current is known as reactance. In addition to the ohmic resistance, we, therefore, have a retarding factor in an alternating current due to the reactance and the combined effect of these two resistances is known as impedance. The reactance due to inductance is known as inductance reactance.

Another form of reactance makes itself known when an alternating current flows in a circuit containing a condenser. If the voltage in an alternating circuit is impressed upon a completely discharged condenser, current will flow, and the voltage of the condenser will increase until it is equal to the impressed voltage of the circuit. When the counter-electromotive force of the condenser becomes equal to the impressed voltage of the circuit, the flow of current will cease. If the impressed voltage is decreased, the condenser will discharge and the counter-electromotive force will cause a current to flow in an opposite direction to the original current.

The form of reactance occasioned by the counter-electromotive force of a condenser is known as capacity reactance. The combined resistance of a circuit containing ohmic resistance and capacity reactance is the impedance of the circuit. Impedance in a circuit, therefore, is the resultant effect of combining either inductance, reactance or capacity reactance, or both, with the ohmic resistance of the circuit.

It is important to note that the counter-electromotive force developed by the self-induction of a coil of wire has an opposite effect to the counter-electromotive force developed by a condenser, the former tending to prolong the current and the latter having the opposite effect. The inductance reactance of a coil of wire also acts in an opposite manner to the capacity reactance of the condenser and these two reactances tend to neutralize each other. If the amounts of inductance reactance and capacity reactance are so adjusted in an alternating current circuit as to exactly neutralize each other, the only resistance offered to the flow of current is the ohmic resistance of the circuit.

When such a condition exists in an alternating current circuit, it is known as electrical resonance and is a very important feature in radio transmiting and receiving circuits. How the valuable property of electrical resonance is made use of in radio circuits will be carefully explained in a lesson to follow.

Cuban Radio Station Hears Georgia Tech Quartet Sing

Tuinucu, Cuba, Audience Picks Up WGM "Plainly"—Is First Foreign Station to Report.

The Georgia Tech Glee club quartet sang to a Cuban audience over WGM, The Atlanta Constitution's broadcasting station, last Friday evening, according to a letter received Wednesday by the radio editor from Frank H. Jones, electrical engineer of the Trinucu Sugar company, of Tuinucu, Cuba.

Mr. Jones, the latest distant addition to The Constitution's continent-wide audience of radio fans writes, under the date of April 21, "I picked up a part of your broadcast this evening, and as near as I could make out, your station is operated by the Georgia Light & Power Co. What is your call? What is your schedule?

"I heard you plain with detector tube only. Tuinucu is 850 miles from Atlana. How long has your station been operating?

"Best wishes, from Frank H. Jones, electrical engineer, Tuinucu Sugar company, Tuinucu, Cuba."

The Tuinucu station is the first one outside the boundaries of the United States to be reached by The Constitution's daily broadcasts. Pittsburg, Denver, Detroit, New York, and other distant points in the United States have reported hearing the service, but Friday's concert was the first to hurdle the deep blue sea and entertain an audience under another flag than the Stars and Stripes.

The Constitution broadcasts through the Georgia Railway & Power Co. station regularly every day from 6 to 6:30 o'clock in he evening and from 9 to 9:30 o'clock at night. Music, dramatic readings, sermons, lectures, addresses by prominent men, market reports, sport news and general news are included in the programs, which are varied from time to suit the tastes of as many as possible of the thousands of listeners-in.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS!

Radio Editor:—Will broadcasting continue, and if so what will support it? ENTHUSIASTIC RADIO FAN.

Broadcasting is here to stay, as you may easily see if you will read the announcements about the new stations that are being erected in New York. The artists who perform at the broadcasting stations are only too glad to give their services for the publicity received. The companies that own the stations find that the number of receiving sets sold, pay for all the expenses. Broadcasting has made possible the sale of thousands of receiving sets. There is no question but what it is here to stay.

Radio Editor:—As I live in an apartment house I find that I cannot bury a wire in the ground for the lightning arrester. What would you suggest in case of this kind? B. B.

You do not have to bury a wire in the ground, but simply drive a pipe into it with a wire attached. If you cannot do this you cannot follow the ruling of the fire underwriters.

Radio Editor:—Can I use 60-cycle A. C. for the plate and the filament current on a one-step radio frequency amplified set? M. S.

Up to the present time it has not been possible to use alternating current for either the plate or filament current of a vacuum tube set. You may be able to work it out, but this department advises against the use of this sort of current.

Radio Editor:—I have the materials for a crystal detector set and would like to know what kind of 'phones to buy? Does it make any difference if the aerial runs straight or caticorner across the roof? How high should I make it? When the set is finished, will I be able to hear music? D. V. W.

For obvious reasons this department cannot recommend any particular make of receivers for your set. The best that we can do is to tell you to get a pair of high resistance receivers of standard make. The receivers should be of at least 2,000 ohms resistance and higher if possible. Your aerial will be all right either way as long as it runs in straight line with the lead-in wire from one end only and not from the middle. The aerial only has to be high enough to clear the heads of any people that may be on the roof. No man can tell you what you will be able to hear when the set is finished. The best thing to do if you do not receive music is to get a good-sized piece of galena and break it up into smaller pieces. Then test out the different pieces until you have a good one.

Radio Editor:—I have a receiver for hearing the music and one of my friends tells me that the wave lengths of this receiver only last three months. when they have to be renewed. Please tell me where can I buy wave lengths and what are the best kind to buy? F. F.

has been trying to have sport with you, as this has nothing to Your so-called "radio friend" do with the set. This department publishes articles explaining wave length very frequently, and you will do well to read them over.

BRYAN AGAIN ASKED TO DELIVER ADDRESS

Columbus, Ohio, April 26.—Reissuance of an invitation to William Jennings Bryan to speak at the International Sunday School convention at Kansas City next June was decided upon today at a meeting of the convention program committee. Withdrawal of an invitation extended Mr. Bryan last December had brought numerous protests.

DEMOCRATS OPPOSE ADVANCE TO LIBERIA

Washington, April 26.—Democratic members of the ways and means committee, in a minority report opposing the Fordney resolution for granting the $5,000,000 loan to Liberia, as authorized in 1918, declared today it was decidedly to the best interests of the United States "to notify all nations of the world that we have ceased to be a 'lady bountiful' and that from henceforth no foreign nation can obtain a loan from the United States treasury."

Suit Against Tax.

Macon, Ga., April 26.—(Special.) An injunction suit to prevent the city of Macon from collecting a tax of a half cent a gallon on gross gasoline sales by Macon dealers during the months of January, February and March was filed in Bibb superior court today by a number of local dealers.

FANS ARE LEARNING TO TELEGRAPH RADIO

Enjoyment of Receiving Set Is Increased by Knowledge of Code.

Broadcasting has made radio one of the most popular movements that ever struck the public fancy, and yet for years radio communication has been carried on by amateurs all over the country. The man in the street gives scant thought to the air about him that is filled with all sorts of messages, either transmitted in voice or in the form of the continental code.

In order to get the fullest enjoyment from the new receiving set this code should be learned by all and one of the easiest ways to do it is to make a small buzzer outfit whereby one of the family can transmit slowly while the other members sit about the living room copying down what is said.

Is Easily Learned.

A few evenings of this sort of work and the speed may be increased considerably and before long messages may be copied directly from the air and then the radio bug will get in its final touches. When the code is learned perfectly the pleasures to be derived from the set will be increased tenfold and the operator of the set will find himself tuning to higher or lower wave lengths and listening to the code messages, rather than the broadcasting.

The Continental code is not a difficult affair to master and cannot be compared with the Morse code as usual by the telegraph companies. This latter code has what is known as spaced letters and they are sometimes very confusing and hard to read, especially for the beginner. The Continental code is composed of dots and dashes that are not hard to remember and the average man who knows nothing whatever about the code can learn the characters themselves in a very short time.

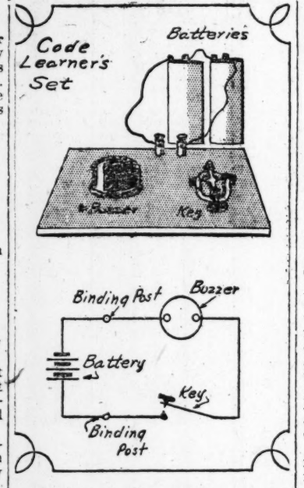
The matter of learning to recive the code is a far diffcrent matter and it may take a month or more to learn it so that the average message may be read. When it is mastered, though, the additional pleasure to be derived will more than repay the amateur.

To the man who uses a honeycomb coil set, one of the best ways to learn the Continenta' code is to get the larger sized coils and plug them in. Get the coils that will allow the station to tune up to 15,000 to 20,000 meters and listen to the high power commercial and navy stations. These stations send at all different speeds from 100 words a minute automatic transmitters down to three words a minute with every word repeated several times.

By starting in at the low speeds it is quite possible to tune up to the higher speeds in time, but do not think that you will ever be able to receive 100 words per minute. Most of these high-powered stations transmit with what is known as a tape and the transmission is absolutely correct and very simple to understand.

Equipment Needed.

A general knowledge will have to be gained first of the characters themselves and for this work a small buzzer with a pair of dry batteries will have to be purchased. A telegraph key of some sort will also have to be bought.



Wire up the instruments as shown in the accompanying diagram and work the set an hour or so every night until the elements of the code are known. For best results get what is known as high frequency buzzer, as it will give a high note more like the actual spark or arc transmitter and when the signals are received on the set the operator will not get confused.

In order to stimulate interest in the code some of the neighborhood radio clubs should get together a regular code class and have code speed contests once in a while. A small prize of some part of a radio set may be donated and put up as an inducement to learn the code and it will not be very long before a great many of the beginners will be listening in to the dot and dash stuff with the same gusto that they are now listening in to the broadcasting.

A good automatic transmitter may be purchased for about $18, and with the aid of this instrument it is quite possible to send the code at either two words a minute or fifty.

BROTHER OFFICERS SHOT BY POLICEMAN

Anniston, Ala., April 26.—Policemen Joe T. Holiday and C. B. Hurst were killed here today by Policeman Marshall Welch. After slaying the two policemen, who were riding in an automobile, Welch drove the car containing the bodies to an undertaking establishment and then surrendered. According to the police Welch said he shot Holiday in self defense and that the shoting of Hurst was accidental.

Bad blood existed between Holiday and Welch, according to Welch's statement, as quoted by the authorities after he surrendered.

While Welch, in company with another policeman, walked about, Holiday and Hurst drove by, according to Welch's report to his superiors. Welch claimed, according to the authorities that Holiday made a movement to draw a weapon, whereupon Welch said he fired, three bullets striking Holiday and two taking effect in Hurst. Both policemen were instantly killed.

New York, April 26.—An early advance on unfavorable weather exports from the southwest was followed by reactions in the cotton market today. Additional May notices estimated at about 2,200 bales seemed to be promptly stopped, but May was freely offered at about 35 points over July, and after selling at 18.22 declined to 17.95, while October eased off from 17.89 to 17.66, closing at 17.70. May rallied to 18.05 at the close, and the general market closed firm, net 5 points lower to 3 points higher.

The market opened steady at an advance of 7 to 12 points on relatively steady cables and the Texas rain and flood news. The latter was accompanied by private reports complaining that a good deal of cotton would have to be replanted, and claims of further delays in the new crop start. Considerable selling was encountered around 17.85 for July and 17.89 for December, however, and the market turned easier during the early afternoon under realizing and southern selling.

Brokers believed to be acting for southwestern spot interests were among the sellers of the old crop months and while the May premium was well maintained, the price of that month eased off with July.

The latter delivery sold down to 17.60, or 13 points net lower and the general list showed net declines of about 2 to 13 points in the late trading. Private cables attributed the relatively firm showing of Liverpool to buying on the unfavorable crop news from Texas, and Manchester advices confirmed yesterday's reports that the Lancashire wage dispute had been settled.

Buying on the unfavorable character of the day's weather news, was probably checked to some extent by the weekly report of the weather bureau, which was regarded as indicating that the crop had made fair progress in most sections. According to local brokers early buyers was among the afternoon sellers owing to the failure of the Texas crop complaints to inspire a more general demand.

New York, April 26.—Spot cotton quiet; middling, 18.20.

PRICES ARE LOWER AT NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, April 26.—Unfavorable weather in the belt put the cotton market higher in the early trading today, but the gains did not last. The market commenced to sag following the reading of the weekly crop reports from the government, which were considered to be rather more favorable than expected and the downward trend was maintained in a mild way until the late trading when the active months were 1 to 15 points under the close of yesterday, May standing at 16.89. The close was at net losses of 1 to 10 points, May closing at 16.94.

Early advances were caused by the further heavy rains in Texas, the rainfall in the central belt and predictions of more showery weather to come. Texas reported very heavy rains and much damage resulting from them, mainly through washing of fields and overflowed streams. Many points wired in that replanting on a large scale would be necessary. Prices advanced 6 to 18 points to 17.10 for May, before the demand was satisfied. The market reached the highest levels of the day at this stage.

Realizing by longs commenced at the advance, but the real setback was given by the official reports for this last week, which indicated rather better progress than expected with planting and which did not reflect the damage in the west from recent rains that has been noted in private reports to brokers. In the late trading the near months felt some little selling which held the entire list down.

Confesses Slaying Of His Sweetheart While Serving Term

Nashville, Tenn., April 26.—Burrell Cordell, inmate at the Tennessee Training and Agricultural school since November 27, 1921, on a charge of stealing an automobile in Memphis, confessed today to the killing of Nora Mullen, 17, in Little Rock, Ark.

Cordell did not remember the exact date of the killing, but thought that it was either in August or September, 1921. He made a complete statement to newspaper men in the presence of officers of the institution.

Cordell said that the parents of the dead girl lived about seven or eight miles from Little Rock. According to Cordell, the Mullen girl had been an inmate of the girls' industrial school at Little Rock for about six months and he claimed to have become acquainted with her following her release from that institution. Cordell declared that he had been going with the girl for some time, and said that on the night prior to the killing she had held him up at the point of a pistol and taken $23 from him.

On the night of the killing Cordell said that he called by the boarding house where the girl was rooming and that they went on an automobile ride. He said that after they had proceeded for several miles outside the limits on the main highway they turned off on an unfrequented road. He said that they left the car and went off the road about a hundred yards. Following the girl's demands for more money, Cordell said that a quarrel arose.

Cordell declared that he completely lost his head, drew a razor and in spite of the girl's screams and pleadings for her life, cut her throat.

Cordell said that he very calmly covered the girl's body with leaves and then went to his own home, where he retired about 2 a. m.

FRESH DECLINES IN WHEAT PRICES

Chicago, April 26.—Favorable crop reports from the southwest together with word of much rain breaking a drought in Australia did much today to bring about a fresh down turn of wheat prices here. The market closed heavy at 7-8 to 3 3-8 net lower with May 1.39 3-4 to 1.40 and July 1.24 to 1.24 3-4. Corn finished unchanged to 1-8 a 1-4 off; oats unchanged to 1-2 cent down and provisions at an advance of 5 to 25 cents.

At first wheat here showed an upward tendency owing largely to the fact that Liverpool quotations had failed to reflect fully the downturn of values yesterday in America. Some skepticism prevailed too, regarding talk which had been current that certain big contracts calling for May delivery of wheat in Chicago had been privately settled. Large export sales resulted from yesterday's sharp break in price was also a temporary bullish influence.

After the opening flurry, however, buying power seemed to lose much of its force and it took no great amount of selling to force the market down, especially during the last hour. Prices for July and September wheat representing the new crop still in the fields, declined to a far greater extent than May, the value of which could be only affected indirectly by present growth conditions, inasmuch as supplies during May will consist altogether of wheat harvested last fall or before. Slackness of demand, however, for wheat already on hand in Kansas City 154 carloads there unsold, today, was generally taken as confirming reports of a decidedly improved crop outlook southwest.

Changes in the price of corn and oats were kept with narrow limits and were governed almost entirely by the action of wheat.

BONUS IS GROWING AS CAMPAIGN ISSUE

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON,
Constitution Bureau,
Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, April 26.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—With additional developments in the bonus legislation, the political atmosphere around the senate today is rife with speculation which may have a further influence on the elections this fall. The developments are as follows:

Sentiment in the senate finance committee is for placating the service men with a bonus bill carrying paid-up life insurance as its fundamental reward.

The veterans still prefer the house bill, but are willing to accept insurance—if they can borrow money upon the policies. Their cry is for ready cash.

On the senate floor there was harsh criticism of the republicans of the finance committee because they held two star chamber sessions with representatives of veterans' organizations and failed to invite either the minority members or the press to these secret metings.

The situation has a dual aspect. First, that on the eve of the national elections, republicans are trying to step to the front with pronounced sympathies for the soldier bonus to the exclusion of democratic participation, hoping to obtain full credit for any measure that may be passed or advocated. And, second, the possibility of "differences" with the president and members of the house over integral parts of the legislation proposed.

Regardless of the trend of things with respect to either of the aspects assumed ultimately, far-reaching results for the democratic party is seen.

Indorsement Given To Plan to Replace Trees on Peachtree

A movement, originating with the Womans' club, through its civic department, to replace the fine old shade trees of Peachtree street which were necessarily destroyed when the widening program was undertaken, has been indorsed by the executive committee of the Atlanta Real Estate board, according to announcement by Ward Wight, president.

The real estate board is seeking the support of the city and county authorities in the plan.

At the weekly luncheon of the board Thursday, to be held at 1 o'clock at the Peacock cafe, talks of fifteen minutes each on charter reform will be made by Councilman Edgar Watkins, Councilman Claude Ashley and Hugh M. Willett.

North Georgia Still Too Wet For Planting

Washington, April 26.—Much damage was done to fruit in the upper Ohio valley and central and northern Appalachian mountain localities by the recent severe frost and freezing temperatures, the weather bureau said today in its weekly weather and crop review.

Moisture conditions, the review said, were favorable in most of the southern states for planting cotton, although the soil was too wet for satisfactory progress in a few localities, especially in the northern portions of Georgia and Alabama. Work was interrupted in the northwestern portion of the belt by general rains the latter part of the week.

Planting of cotton made excellent progress in Texas and extended to the extreme northwestern portion of the cotton growing area. The nights were too cool, however, for rapid germination in most sections of the belt, although the early planted cotton that is up made fairly good progress. In eastern districts the crop has advanced to the stage where it is ready to chop out in sections of the coastal plains of South Carolina, while chopping progressed favorably in the more southeastern districts. Late planted cotton is germinating slowly in Florida.

INFORMAL DECISION TO COM

STOCK FLUCTUATIONS IN CONTROL OF SPECULATORS

Prices Are Irregular Throughout Very Active Trading of Wednesday

BY R. L. BARNUM
Constitution's New York Financial Correspondent

New York, April 26.—The movement of prices on the stock exchange today again showed evidences that fluctuations were in control of the speculative element. The movement was irregular during the greater part of the session, declines being witnessed in one section of the list, as a result of profit taking and short selling while in others new favorites were taken in hand and bid upward. Trading was again active, the total being in excess of a million shares, the nineteenth consecutive million shares day so far and the twenty-seventh since the beginning of the year.

Studebaker, which has been a strong feature for some time past on expectation that the directors would declare an extra dividend on the common stock, was heavy today in connection with reports that no extra payment could be expected at the meeting to be held later in the week.

Certain of the railroad stocks which moved so violently upward in the late dealings on Tuesday, lost part of their gains today. Kansas City Southern was the feature in this connection.

The street is paying more attention to the movement of business in this country than to the Genoa conference. This is shown by the action of the stock market and the foreign exchanges in connection with the latest developments abroad. Another factor here is the low rate for call money and the abundant supply.

Although the United States Steel corporation reported smaller net earnings during the first quarter of this year as compared with the closing quarter of 1921, and the company failed to earn its preferred dividend by a small margin, the street was favorably impressed by the statement. This was especially true regarding the statement by months which showed that net earnings which approximated $4,500,000 in January almost doubled that figure in March when the total was above $8,500,000. With operations much larger than during the first quarter of the year and prices advanced in numerous cases, Wall street is predicting that the company will earn its common dividend during the current quarter.

No Change.

It is now almost four weeks since the coal strike started and the steel trade reports that there has been virtually no change in operations as a result of the shutdown of certain mines.

The United States Steel corporation is reported to be quoting 1.60 cents a pound for steel plates, against 1.50 quoted only a few days ago. This advance, which amounts to $2 a ton, is the first to be put into effect by the leading factor in the trade since the coal strike began. The company has been adopting a conservative policy on the ground that some of the advances may be unwarranted.

Montana Power company for the first quarter of 1922 reports net earnings available for dividends of $611,235, against $637,476 in 1921. The small decrease in net earnings is due to the fact that in the first quarter of 1921 many mines in companies territory were in operation, whereas in the first quarter of this year operations were suspended. Since April 1, however, mining activity has increased considerably in Montana so that increased earnings are expected in the future.

Commenting on conditions in iron and steel trade, Iron Trade Review says: "Some of the sharp anxiety over supplies that characterized situation a week ago seems to have gone out of the market. Underlying demand for material remains heavy and it is indicated many buyers have not satisfied their full requirements, but appear more interested in getting shipments against orders already placed than to increase commitments under spur of further uncertainties in connection with the strike."

Encouraging Features.

The most encouraging feature in the general situation is the manner in which the new bond offerings are being licked up by investors. The $45,000,000 New York city issue is being offered at 104 and interest to yield slightly better than 4.06 per cent. The syndicate is expected to have little difficulty in selling these bonds because of the fact they are tax exempt and therefore desirable to wealthy investors. The $100,000,000 Canadian loan was disposed of within two hours after the books were opened, while the $40,000,000 Empire Gas & Fuel bonds were disposed of the same day. This is considered a remarkable record.

Export price of gasoline has been advanced a cent a gallon by the larger local exporting companies. Atlantic Refining announced an advance of 1 cent in the territory served by the company.

Earnings Reports.

The recent much talked of seven company steel merger has simmered down to three companies, according to gossip in the street today. These companies include Midvale, Republic and Inland.

The Merritt Oil corporation for 1921 reports net earnings of $999,456 against $2,401,994 in 1920. After payment of charges and depreciation there was a net loss of $260,869 against a profit of $936,712 in the previous year.

The Philadelphia company for first quarter 1922 reports gross income of $4,103,560, an increase of $100,279, compared with same period last year. Net earnings totaled $2,124,363, an increase of $489,833. The above net does not include income from investments, but is figured before allowing for interest charges.

Delay in the Brazilian loan of $45,000,000, which was expected early in the week, said to be due to dispute between Rio Harbor & Dock company and the Brazilian government. The harbor company is reported to have sent protests in connection with the loan to London and local financial houses as well as to the press.

New York, April 26.—The reactionary tone of today's financial market disclosed increased caution on the part of professional interests and the public. Price movements were hesitant for the greater part of the session, developing heaviness in the final hour.

Early strength among domestic oils, which contributed enormously to the day's large turnover at extreme gains of 1 to 4 points, together with steady buying of secondary or independent steels, was matched by heaviness in foreign oils, the motors and their specialties, the general transportation list and local utilities.

Selling assumed its widest proportions toward the close, when offerings of United States Steel, Studebaker, Mexican Petroleum, General Motors, Kelly-Springfield, United States Rubber, American Sugar and the cheaper rails effected net losses of 1 to almost 3 points.

Standard Oils of New Jersey and California, Associated, Cosden, California Petroleum and Pacific, Houston and Sinclair oils forfeited much, and in some instances all of their substantial advances, and little was left of the early improvement shown by steels.

There were no developments to account for the late reactions, but commission houses and the conservative element were on record as favoring a temporary halt in the long sustained bull movement. Among traders some disappointment was expressed at the showing made by United States Steel in the quarterly report.

Foreign exchanges were not affected by early cables dealing with developments at Genoa, but the entire continental range eased perceptibly later. Sterling was the one important exception, demand bills hardening on reported buying of cotton bills.

TOKIO IS SHAKEN BY VIOLENT QUAKE

Tokio, April 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—A heavy earth shock, centering in Tokio, occurred at 10:15 o'clock this morning. Considerable damage was done to buildings in the city and their contents.

The earthquake was preceded by an eruption yesterday of Mount Asama-Yama, 90 miles northwest of Tokio, which broke out with a loud report, pouring forth volumes of ashes, stones and smoke. No serious damage was caused by the eruption.

The earthquake caused the death of a few persons, none of the victims, however, being Americans or Europeans.

Many Narrow Escapes.

There were many escapes of the narrowest sort from collapsing chimneys and walls.

The earthquake was one of the most severe experienced here in a long period. Officials stated it lasted fifteen minutes, the longest in years.

The American embassy was slightly damaged and many of the exhibits at the peace exposition were broken.

Yokohama Shaken.

Yokohama was as severely shaken as Tokio, and the Chinese quarter in Yokohama was virtually destroyed and the waterworks disrupted.

The seismographs at the observatory were damaged, making it impossible to obtain an accurate record of the shocks.

Telephone and telegraph service was interrupted.

Ireland Once More Divided, and Hope Of Peace Fleeing

Belfast, April 26.—Ireland is once more divided into hostile halves and hope of amicable relations between the south and Ulster has gone.

The peace which seemed about to be realized through the London agreement, is farther away than ever, and even the truce itself has been ruptured.

This situation was disclosed with publication of the correspondence between Michael Collins, head of the Irish provisional government, and Sir James Craig, premier of Ulster, indicating that there has been a complete break between the north and south of Ireland.

Collins stated it was impossible to make further progress toward a permanent peace until the vital clauses of the London agreement, made a month ago, have been fulfilled by Ulster. He considered Craig's attitude toward release of free state prisoners arrested in Ulster entirely unsatisfactory.

Craig rported that the Free staters have not shown the Ulsterites any courtesy or consideration, and that some of their actions have been calculated to embarrass the administration. Despite the agreement, armed incursions into Ulster continued, Craig said. "He regretted" the disturbances at Belfast, but said he was handicapped in suppressing them. Prisoners whose release was being demanded by Collins were for the most part convicted of murder or other serious crimes, Craig insisted.

Figures disclosing a reign of violence during recent months were quoted by Lord Justice Moore, in opening the assizes. Belfast's good name has been blackened everywhere as a result, he said.

There is no use blinking the fact, the lord justice declared, that a population of over 400,000 is being held up by 800 criminals. Since February, his figures showed, there have been 97 murders, 57 attempted murders, 150 housebreakings, 130 robberies and thirty cases endangering life.

Another Anthropoid Believed Discovered In Fossil Deposit

Washington, April 26.—The previous existence on this continent of a new genus and species of primate "much more closely resembling the human type than it does any knowledge of species of ape," although distinct from either, is believed to have been established by the recent discovery of a small tooth in the faunal deposits of Nebraska, according to a paper read at the concluding session here of the National Academy of Sciences by Dr. Henry F. Osborn of the American Museum of Natural History.

A number of authorities, Dr. Osborn said, agreed with his deduction that the discovery had established the existence in the "pliocene period" of a "new and independent type of anthropoid, or man-like animal." Entire credit for the discovery, he said, belonged to Mr. Harold J. Cook, a consulting geologist of Agate, Neb.

Four Distinguished Chefs Boss Preparation of Brunswick Stew

Brunswick stew is essentially a Georgia institution, just like Stone mountain, Rabun gap, Tybee light and the red clay hills. It consists of mighty nearly everything and a washboiler and a couple of paddles.

A Brunswick stew is as essential to a Georgia barbecue as the declaration of independence is to a Fourth of July celebration, and as Sam Weller remarked, "it's the seasoning as does it."

What the Brunswick stew was seasoned with out at Druid Hills Wednesday remains a mystery—as is typical of Brunswick stew—to all but four notables. Certainly no wash-boiler was ever watched over by more distinguished chefs de cuisine than the old-fashioned utensil out at Druid Hills.

The quartet in charge of the caldron consisted of none other than Robert F. Maddox, president of the Atlanta National bank, and a whole lot of other things; Antonio Scotti, eminent baritone and the father of opera in Atlanta; S. Davies Warfield, railroad magnate of Baltimore, and distinguished patron of the Atlanta brand of opera, and Leon Rothier, the distinguished French basso, who would no more think of missing a Druid Hills cue than he would of trying to sing an Orville Harrold role.

And they did their work well.

Eloped With Girl Who Killed Herself; Is Now on Trial

McDonough, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—A trial that is attracting considerable attention throughout Henry county is that of Clifford Hood, of Carroll county, on the charge of kidnaping of Miss Gertrude Hinton, of Stockbridge, in 1918. The case is being heard before Judge W. E. H. Searcy in the superior court.

Hood was a soldier stationed at Camp Gordon in 1918. He met Miss Hinton and called on her a number of times during the summer of 1918 and in September she ran away from home to marry him, it is alleged. They were next heard from in San Antonio, Texas, where they were stopping at a hotel. It is alleged that she was deserted there by Hood and rather than face the ordeal of returning home, she committed suicide. Later her body was returned to Stockbridge for burial. It has been testified that Hood had a wife living at this time. There are other bills pending against him in connection with the case. Hood has just completed serving a three-year sentence at Fort Leavenworth on the charge of desertion from the army in connection with the case.

thrown into wild excitement by the two developments and the dark warning voiced by Lloyd George has left a heavy cloud hanging over Genoa.

George Alarmed.

Lloyd George is without doubt thoroughly alarmed over the situation. France has created by the threat to act alone against Germany. His dramatic utterance at the dinner was taken as a direct warning that France must abandon her present attitude if Europe is to be spared another horrible war.

Lloyd George warned the correspondents that Europe faces potential war unless the Genoa conference is a success. Otherwise another conflagration is inevitable within the present generation, he declared.

The British premier warned against a combination of Russia, Hungary and an angry Germany seeking vengeance.

Peace Threatened.

"Every eastern frontier from the Baltic to the Black sea remains unsettled and threatens peace," he asserted.

He wished America had come to Genoa for then, her disinterested position would have been a powerful influence tending toward a settlement of European questions. He realized he said, that any suggestion to America coming from Europe would be subject to suspicion, but he warned that the United States would nevertheless be vitally interested in the event of another European war which would inevitably draw her in as did the last one.

DISCUSS POSSIBLE FAILURE TO PAY.

Genoa, April 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—Announcement by the British delegation that a meeting of the signatories of the Versailles treaty will be held in Genoa within a fortnight to determine upon action in the event of Germany's failing to meet her reparations obligations at the end of May was the chief feature of today's conference activities. This call for a meeting of the allies was inspired by Premier Poincare's bar le duc address intimating that France was prepared to act alone if the allies failed to support her in enforcing the treaty.

Poland replied to Russia's protest charging the Poles with violating treaties with Russia and seeking to undermine Russian sovereignty. The Polish reply asserted that the Poles were endeavoring to assist in the reconstruction of Russia and had no thought of violating their treaty agreements with Russia.

While the leading statesmen assembled in Genoa were consulting each other on what kind of a reply they should make to the bolsheviki counterproposals, and what would be the probable scope of the non-aggression pact which it is proposed to submit to the conference, the experts here from many lands were hurrying on with their technical work connected with economics, finance and transport.

The transport commission held a final session and recommended the urgency of the powers adopting all possible measures in concert to improve the transport system of Europe. The league of nations was asked to invite the nations, whether members or non-members of the league, to work together on technical matters furthering the cause of transport.

The experts insist that important things have already been done at Genoa in the way of improving conditions; these largely have taken form of arranging for future conventions, but it is pointed out that the present convention including 34 states has brought about knowledge of actual conditions in Europe, which is certain to prove beneficial for future amelioration. Much is expected from the currency and general financial meetings which will be held at London and Paris.

The exact form of Mr. Lloyd George's proposed pact has been the subject of discussions among the leaders, as they wish to introduce a measure strong enough to be genuinely effective in reducing to a minimum the chances of war. The Washington four-power act is frequently referred to as an example on which this project may be based.

KING OF SWEDEN INJURED IN WRECK

Grenoble, France, April 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—King Gustav of Sweden was painfully injured today when the automobile in which he was proceeding from Nice to Geneva was struck by a machine owned by a prominent Geneva banker. King's chamberlain was thrown from the car, gravely injured. The king suffered contusions of the left side.

GENERAL MILES, VETERAN OF 60'S, SERIOUSLY ILL

Physicians reported late Wednesday that his condition is greatly improved and that he will soon recover. Miles was stricken Monday. His illness prevents his participating as grand marshal in the Grant Memorial day parade here Thursday.

32 PEOPLE DIE AS FRENCH SHIP SINKS IN STORM

Brest, France, April 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—Thirty-two lives were lost when the French steamer Deputy Albert Taillandier, a vessel of 3,000 tons, bound from Rotterdam for Brest with a cargo of coal, foundered last night over the northern coast of Brittany during a violent storm. The captain of the ship, the sole survivor, was picked up today by the Greek steamer Pelagia.

Lady Astor Appeals For Moral Influence Of American Women

Baltimore, April 26.—The big contribution that women can make to politics and national life is to face and tackle the moral standard, Lady Astor told a crowded mass meeting here tonight.

She pleaded with the women of America to insist upon the single standard of morality, "not by lowering their standard, but by raising man's standard to that of women."

She believed that if the mothers of France, who have suffered so much had the vote and had learned how to use it, there would not now exist "the amazing French attitude at Genoa."

"That is one of the tragedies of France and threatens to be one of the tragedies of the world," she said. "Poor France, blinded by her suffering, can't see that the only way out is to look forward and not backward."

The first woman seated in the house of commons, cheered continually tonight, asked women to put into public life the qualities they "have had to put into their home life—unselfishness, cleanliness and kindness."

She told the women, assembled here for the national convention of the league of women voters, that they were right not to make a new political party.

"You are equally right to try and lift and raise and improve the platforms of both the big political parties by joining them," she added. "See that you send neither wind bags nor carpetbaggers to represent you."

His Case Dismissed, Attorney Appeals To Court's Conscience

Washington, April 26.—An appeal to the "conscience" of the supreme court is made in a brief field by Robert A. Widemann, an unsuccessful litigant. Asserting that the people are "entitled to be fully informed as to what, if any are the limitations upon the delegated authority of their legislative servants in proposing and ratifying amendments to the constitutions" the brief respectfully points out to the court that, until it delivers such an opinion, "it will not fulfill either its functions or its duty as a body of judicial servants of the people."

Widemann sought to have set aside as unconstitutional the prohibition amendment, and his case was dismissed, without opinion, on the authority of cases previously decided and which were cited.

Insisting that he is entitled to a decision by the court, stating its reason, Widemann declares that unless he obtains it, "the servants of the people have become the people's masters, for they can exercise any power they choose and not account to the people."

QUINTET OF RUSSIANS ARRESTED AT GENOA

London, April 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—Five Russians, including Kerensky's former secretary, Boris Slavinkoff, were arrested in Genoa by the Italian police on Sunday, says a dispatch to The Daily Herald. Slavinkoff arrived in Genoa under a false name and with a forged passport, and the police found he and his companions had a plan of the hotel at which the Russian soviet delegation is staying.

The correspondent says that Slavinoff, since the bolshevist revolution in Russia, has been the chief link between the French government and the succession of anti-bolshevist military leaders, and that a month or two ago he was in London in close consultation, with Prime Minister Lloyd George and Viscount Curzon, the foreign minister.

Freedom of Movies Is Battle Slogan Of Will H. Hays

New York, April 26.—Freedom of the movies is as essential as freedom of the press, Will H. Hays declared at a dinner of American publishers here Wednesday night.

Questions of ethics, policy and freedom which the newspapers had been called on to solve in the last twenty generations, the motion picture industry has had to meet in the scant twenty years since its beginning, Hays said, and "we are in confusion because of the very rapidity of our growth and development.

"We must not attempt to do too much with this opportunity. There must be no notion of implanting particular ideas or propaganda. Our first duty must be to keep our institution free. We must avoid the faintest taint of the propagandist.

"We must not, therefore, have censorship in this industry. The only censorship that can work is the approval of the public for the better standards we will supply."

Hays refused to "be put in the attitude of being a judge of the morals of those in the industry. There has been much loose talk on that subject. The morals in this industry are just as good as those in any other."

QUAKERS ADOPT INITIAL STAND IN COAL STRIKE

Swarthmore, Pa., April 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—Marking the first important step officially taken by American Quakers in industrial questions, the Swarthmore Friends, in monthly meeting tonight, adopted a resolution urging President Harding to appoint a commission to arbitrate the dispute between the coal operators and miners, inquire into the causes of the conditions leading up to the present and previous strikes in the coal industry, and to suggest adequate remedies to prevent their recurrence. Copies of the resolution, which was presented to the meeting in the form of a report by the committee appointed by the Quakers to investigate the coal industry, will be sent to President Harding and to the quarterly and yearly meetings of Hicksite Friends.

Kitchen dishes made of glass, reinforced with wire, have been invented.

The Dominican republic is expected to raise 25,000,000 pounds of tobacco this year, as compared with about 10,000,000 pounds last year.

A hand-operated machine has been invented to cut and lift sod so carefully so that it can be replaced when trenches are dug across lawns.

Until a coin is dropped in a slot in a new device, an arm-holding air hose for inflating automobile tires cannot be lowered to be of use.

Accounts of rains of fishes, according to Dr. E. W. Gudger, are not necessarily "fish stories." He says such falls of fishes from the sky may be caused by high winds, whirlwinds and waterspouts that draw up the fishes from the water and scatter them as their force is spent.

Writer Ranks Henry Grady As Second Only to Webster Among America's Orators

Warm praise of the oratorical ability of Henry W. Grady, former editor of The Constitution, is contained in an article contributed to The Holyoke, Mass., Transcript by John A. Callahan, for thirty-five years principal of the Highlands district schools of Holyoke and well known for philanthropic work he has done in recent years. Mr. Callahan compares Grady to Daniel Webster and other great American orators and ranks Grady second only to Webster as a constructive public speaker and statesman.

Mr. Callahan is a deep student of American history and statesmanship, and has made a particular study of the work of the great public speakers of the country. In philanthrophic work which he has undertaken recently he is aiding students to obtain education at Amherst, Mount Holyoke and Smith colleges. Recently he gave $50,000 for this cause and has been active for many years in enlisting the interest of men of wealth throughout the country to establish scholarships in leading educational institutions.

In his article on orators printed in the Holyoke newspaper he discusses the careers of Daniel Webster and Henry Grady and also discusses the work of the late Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts; Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts; former Governor McCall, of Maine; Thomas Brackett Reed, of Maine, and Edward Everett.

Recalls Grady's Speech.

After praising the ability of Webster and reviewing his career Mr. Callahan discusses the career of Grady as follows:

"I am trying to prepare the way for placing Henry Grady as the second orator of high rank in our country's history. Many citizens of Holyoke went to Boston in December, 1889, when Grady, then editor of The Atlanta Constitution, was the orator celebrating the anniversary of the Pilgrim fathers. He was already the orator of the south, but after the Boston address his fame was national and his fame as an orator was on a firm foundation. He died of pneumonia in two days after he reached his southern home and the whole country mourned the loss of the great man who died in the prime of his manhood as the supreme orator of the south. I made a detour in my recent journey to Florida in order that I might pass through Atlanta and see the superb monument to Grady—the bronze statue on a high pedestal which the city erected in honor of the man who shed lustre on Georgia and the south. Three simple words on the monument tell the story—'Journalist, Orator, Patriot.'

"A second inscription says this: 'He did not seek and would not accept public office.' The south has honored Grady and in honoring him has indorsed the policy which he claimed must govern the relations of the north and south with each other. That position was as follows: The south must accept the results of the war and carry them out in good faith and in good spirit, and when they are doing this it is demanded of the north that this good spirit and good work must be recognized and appreciated in a way worthy of the men who have made New England famous as the cradle of our liberties.

Webster-Grady Parallel.

"Grady's great address at Boston was almost entirely free from manuscript reading and could be truly called an oration in every sense of the word. I think there is no other man in our entire history who has so good a claim to be placed in the same class with Webster, the adopted son of Massachusetts who now sleeps his long sleep at Marshfield-by-the-Sea.

"It is singular that each man secured national fame at the same age, 38 years. Webster was born in 1782 and delivered his first great oration at Plymouth in 1820. Even if he had died this year his fame would have been secure. Grady was born in 1861, and delivered his great address in Boston in 1889. He died a few days later at the age of 38, but this Boston address on high patriotic ground placed his name on a safe foundation.

"Webster was the pride of his college, Dartmouth, one of the fine colleges of the north. Grady was the pride of the college where his faculties were trained, the University of Virginia, founded by Thomas Jefferson, the leading university of the south. Both men have been honored by statues in the capitals of their states. Webster's statue is in front of the statehouse in Boston. Grady's statue is at the crossing of two crowded streets in Atlanta. Webster was a lawyer by profession, easily the leader of the American bar. Grady was a journalist and made The Atlanta Constitution the great newspaper of the south.

Both Stood for Unity.

"Both of these men after all had the same mission. Webster in his generation was the supreme figure that brought the people to feel that we must have national unity, that there must be one nation. Grady, after war, preached an undying love for both sections and that there must be no north and no south. His great address on 'The New South' contained a great tribute to the Pilgrims and all the men who made New England civilization. He stood for national unity after the war between the states as Webster had stood before it. Grady's greatness was shown by the fact that he became as much loved in the north as he was in the south. These two men must be judged by their mission and the way that they served in its accomplishment. As the generations pass by us and our nation's work is reviewed I think we will more clearly see that these two orators shine like stars above the others and surpass them in power to move and sway great masses of men as the winds move the sea.

"I am not sorry that I went through Atlanta and saw the fine monument in honor of the immortal Grady. I had a very pleasant visit with his son, Henry W. Grady, Jr., head of an engraving company, who is always pleased to see those northern people who are appreciative of his distinguished father."

No. 65 Park Drive
BOULEVARD PARK

We have exclusive charge of this beautiful bungalow, situated on the corner of N. Boulevard and Park drive, and we have authority to offer the place at a price of $12,000. Heretofore, it has not been offered for less than $15,000.

This is a new seven-room bungalow with slate roof, and it is such a good looking house that it attracts everyone who passes by. We are going to offer it on terms of $2,500 cash, terms on the balance to be arranged to suit the customer.

The home market is improving every day now, and many good houses are being sold. In the meantime the lot question is getting serious and builders find it hard to secure desirable building sites. If anyone has in mind the purchase of a home, there is nothing to be gained by putting it off.
